Lilac Offspring Top Md. Holstein Convention Sale

EVA MARTIN
Maryland Correspondent

WEST FRIENDSHIP, Md. — The sale of two offspring of the multiple-award winning C Cathland Lilac of Gay-Ridge Holsteins in Ijamsville, Md., recently topped the 1991 Maryland Holstein Association Convention Sale and broke records, bringing a combined price of more than $40,000.

The convention sale gross was $184,350, according to early figures.

The price for Gay Ridge AJ Lilac-ET, a young heifer calf, set a new record for the Maryland convention with a price of $20,100.

Her brother, Gay-Ridge Sir Lilac-ET, brought almost as much with a $20,000 price.

All American Syndicate, based in Point-Of-Rocks, Md., bought the top consignment, while Lilac Syndicate, of Damascus, Md., purchased the young bull.

Both calves were sired by Bridon Astro Jet-Et.

Excitement and tension in the crowd of more than 400 began to rise as they listened to the chant of auctioneer Dennis Remsburg work the crowd for bids on the choice selection from C Cathland "Lilac."

It was soon evident that a new record for Maryland convention sales would be made, as the bidding quickly exceeded the $16,000 mark.

When the bidding slowed somewhat, pedigree reader, Norman Hill, quickly reminded the crowd and the bidders of the outstanding opportunity to purchase offspring from the Lilac family.

TREVOSE (Bucks Co.) — The Dairy Council Inc. held its 71st annual meeting Tuesday in southern Bucks County in order to review the past year's actions, new directions and recognize achievements.

Dairy Council Inc. is a health and nutrition organization that was formed in the early 1900s to help combat malnutrition, mainly in children, and were encouraging the consumption of milk to help combat health problems which the consumption of milk helped to avert.

The purpose of the council extends beyond the singular role of dairy consumption activist to the context of endorsing dairy products' role in a balanced diet, consisting of the four major food groups.

The staff of the organization includes communications experts

Accelerated Lambing Needed To Support Direct Marketing

EVERETT NEWSWANGER

ELIZABETHVILLE (Dauphin Co.)—Sheep producers in Pennsylvania were excited when they first went to a meeting to learn about a new plan to direct market lambs. The collection stations were set up and the consumer demand was established.

But then the enthusiasm diminished To direct market lambs, you need a constant monthly supply of lambs all year, and lambs must be uniform in size, bone structure and weight. And in Pennsylvania most sheep producers have only one lambing time each year, and these lambs come from many different breeds and cross breeds. So everything you need for a direct marketing program is missing in Pennsylvania's sheep industry.

Bill and Helen Mende, Elizabethville, were at the direct marketing meeting and reported the reaction of the other producers who attended. And the Mende's have the answer to the problem if you are willing to do the work and management necessary to accomplish the task. The program they

Amish Farmers Say Tobacco Auction, More Type 609 Needed

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

BART (Lancaster Co.)—Several Amish farmers in southeast Lancaster County asked for this interview because of their concern about the tobacco market. Not because the price is too low, but because the tobacco market may be lost.

The interview took place at the kitchen table of the spokesmen who said a number of farmers think as they do. But no one wanted to be identified.

So here's a summary of what these farmers said.

Farmers need the tobacco industry to off-set the low milk prices. But they may lose their tobacco market if more farmers don't grow Type 609 and if they don't sell their tobacco through the Paradise auction.

Type 609 brings a higher price than Type 41. But Type 41 usually produces more weight and is therefore more profitable. But Type 609 sets the market price even for Type 41 because the company buyers from the South come to the auction to buy 609 and pay more than local buyers the spokesmen called middlemen.

The concern expressed by the growers is that if these southern company buyers don't have a larger supply, they will not come to the action, and then the price will go down to what the middlemen will pay on the farm. The spokesmen said they expect an increase in tobacco acreage this year and reported that one contractor in their part of the county already has orders to build 17 new tobacco sheds.

Only a small percentage of the tobacco is sold through the auction; the remainder is sold by private treaty at the farm. The spokesmen criticized their fellow growers who didn't sell at the action and called them short-sighted to save two cents per pound in commissions now but lose the auction in the future. This will happen if more growers do not use the auction service and if they do not increase the local supply of Type 609.

If the auction is lost, the spoksmen say the tobacco price will be back in the hands of the middlemen, much lower than the $1.50 per pound for Type 41 and $1.75 per pound for Type 609 farmers received this year.

"Everybody will farm tobacco," the spoksemen said. "But few are trying to maintain the price In the South all the tobacco is sold through the auction houses."

The spokesmen said in the last two years, because of the Paradise auction, the price for Lancaster County's cash crop has gone up 30 percent. They say they don't want to lose this price advantage.

N.E. Chicken Parts

March 13, 1991

Trucklot buying interest was mixed and selective and generally unaggressive. Supplies of boneless breasts tightened at several points as some processors curtailed schedules; some dealers continued to note fully adequate supplies at unchanged prices while others noted supplies as tight and firmly held. Whole breasts were in fairly good balance. Leg items were at least adequate and wings were fully adequate to ample.

"2852 alfalfa stands up to everything."

"I've been using 2852 for four years," says Clyde Kreider of Millersville, Pa., "and it takes dry weather and wet weather equally well.

"In fact, two years ago when we had a great deal of wet weather it stood right through it when other alfalfas were going down."

THE OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC

MAR. 18-24, 1991

Vernal Equinox, Mar. 20.

Mar 18, 1543, first-known flood in America is recorded by explorer Fernando De Soto as he encounters the swollen Mississippi River (The flood waters peaked on Apr 20) Mar 19, swallows return to San Juan Capistrano Mar 20, 1852, Uncle Tom's Cabin, by Harriet Beech Stowe, is published in book form with a million copies being sold in the first six months Mar 22, 1630, colonists in Boston are forbidden by statute to gamble A pack of cards is the devil's prayer book

Ask the Old Farmer: Now that the snow is melting, all the leaves that didn't get raked up are evident Can these be put to any useful purpose? T L , Pa

Some can be added to your compost pile and some can be put on the garden and tilled in when the ground is workable

Home Hints After ripping out a seam eliminate the telltale needle holes by placing a cloth soaked in white vinegar under the garment and pressing with a hot iron

OLD FARMER'S WEATHER FORECAST

New England: Severe cold begins yet another week, but a midweek change brings showers with snow in the mountains Continuing rainy and mild to end the week

Greater New York-New Jersey: Initially severely cold, but turning milder by midweek The second half of the week is rainy and gradually cooling

Middle Atlantic Coastal: First clear then rainy and warm, ending with showers and very warm The month's average of 49 F is 3° above the norm

Piedmont & Southeast Coastal. Clear, with cold nights for the first half of the week Then rainy and milder temperatures The weekend is cloudy and warm

GOLDEN LEAF TOBACCO CO. INC.

We at Golden Leaf Tobacco Co. would like to thank our customers for your support during the 1990 tobacco sales season. We are the largest buyer of 609 tobaccos in Lancaster Co. and regret that we were not allowed to buy more tobacco at the auction building this year. Nevertheless, we hope the competition we created through private sales helped establish an excellent market for the 1990 season. We ask you to consider our company in your market plans for the 1991 609 crop. If we can assist you in any way during the upcoming growing season please give us a call.

Again, thanks from myself and our buying staff

OPINION

A Pivotal Year

Last year showed us how volatile conditions can be in a free market environment. And in December, prices would have fallen to lower levels if price supports had not continued to be a part of dairy policy. Current supply and demand conditions can be summed as follows: 1 percent increase in sales, 3 percent increase in production, and virtually no export sales of non-fat solids.

Dr. Paul Hand, general manager, Atlantic Dairy Cooperative, said that in 1989 and the first six months of 1990, only butterfat was produced in excess of market needs. Since late summer, however, production of butter, non-fat solids and cheese has been excessive. Prices of these commodities are all at or below support levels. This will mean substantially lower farm prices for 1991 and early 1992.

The 1990 Farm Bill provides an area where supplies can be influenced, resulting in improved pricing. Provision has been made for the USDA and the industry to develop an "inventory management" program. Such a program can be substituted for all the across-the-board assessments that will otherwise be made if production exceeds commercial sales by 7 billion pounds or more. Currently, the support price floor of $10.10 per hundredweight prevents any further price reductions. However, additional assessments from producers can be utilized, thus reducing prices to those affected.

This initiative contained in the 1990 Farm Bill is only a beginning step toward addressing the problem of balancing supplies with demand. The mechanism or programs to be developed will require substantial unity among all dairy interests — and support from USDA.

The difficult task of developing action programs will require the positive effort of all dairy farmers. Already, some so-called leaders are developing extreme positions and creating confusion among producers. 1991 will be a year of opportunity to develop needed programs for long-run solutions to both supply and inventory management. Wild rhetoric will not be productive.

The free market works. However, the roller coaster effect on prices is too damaging to much of the industry. Surely alternatives can be developed that will receive the support of the great majority of dairy farmers. This makes 1991 truly a pivotal year.

NOW IS THE TIME

By Jay Irwin

To Be Patient

This is the time of year that we are under strain and pressure to get a lot of jobs underway for the planting season. It also means that we are not as patient with people and livestock. Let's be careful, as we move our cattle around, and not give them that extra slap or prod to try to speed up movement. Keep in mind, that extra shove or push could have an effect on production. Cows can "sense" the change in pace and temperament and respond with a little less production.

There is a great deal of activity in the spring season, but let's not take it out on our cattle. Be patient and try to maintain a relaxed schedule as we move our livestock around. It'll pay off in the milk check.

We find that in the best producing herds the animals are relaxed and the workers are relaxed. This tells us something about the tender loving care that cattle need.

To Practice Farm Safety

Spring is traditionally a pleasant time on the farm. It is a time to get out in the field and enjoy the change in the weather and the anticipation of a new cropping season. All the anticipation of good things to come can be ruined by one accident. According to Robert Anderson, Extension Agronomy Agent, following a few rules can help keep the spring season a happy one on the farm.

Operate and maintain equipment in accordance with the operator's manual. Shut off power before unclogging, adjusting, or servicing equipment. Keep children off all equipment. Adjust ground speed to field conditions. Stay clear of ditches, steep slopes and other obstructions. Check tires, hitches, lights, SMV emblems and brakes daily. Don't overload or overwork equipment. Adjust road travel speed to load and road conditions.

To Apply Poultry Manure Sparingly

With the large poultry population in this region, poultry manure is in good supply. Since poultry manure may contain from 15 pounds to nearly 50 pounds of nitrogen per ton, depending on moisture and litter content, over application can burn crops and result in disappointments. Gardeners should not be using heavy amounts of fresh manure in their soils. On cropland it is recommended that poultry manure applications be limited to not more than 5 to 7 tons of 75% moisture content per acre.

Keep in mind that some poultry manure may contain up to 50 pounds of nitrogen per ton and can burn seeds and crop roots. Poultry manure is also the highest in phosphorus and potash of any of our farm manures. It has excellent fertilizer value when used properly.

The 1991-92 Agronomy Guide (pages 24-25) gives additional details about the fertilizer values of farm manures. The Agronomy Guide is available through any extension office in Pennsylvania for a $6.00 fee.

To Remove Trash

Landowners along rural roads are the victims of people who have little respect for the property of others. Too many people are dumping trash in fields along the road. In all cases when this is dumped on pastures or cropland, the trash should be removed before spring growth begins. This trash will be hard on farm equipment when on cropland and may be poisonous to livestock when on pastureland.

We urge property owners to remove the trash in the next week or two. If any type of identification can be made, as to the owner of the trash, this should be reported to Township officials; prosecution can be made for dumping trash along the highway.

Editor:

This is to wish Jay Irwin a happy retirement.

I'm sure his service to Lancaster Countians as Extension Director will long be remembered there. As one who has read Mr. Irwin's column "Now Is The Time" for years, I selfishly hope it will continue to run in your fine paper. His tips and reminders are invaluable; they obviously come from a man with real insight into the work of farm management.

WHAT WE REALLY NEED

March 17, 1991

Background Scripture:
Matthew 18:21-34.
Devotional Reading:
Psalms 103:1-14.

If you are the one doing the forgiving, sometimes Jesus' command to "forgive one another" seems rather unfair. Some people, it seems, take advantage of our forgiving nature. They come back for forgiveness repeatedly. Really, there ought to be some limits on forgiving!

In one of my parishes was a man who kept a little notebook in which he chronicled all his marital conflicts and spats. He took literally what he thought were the limits that Jesus placed on forgiveness: "I do not say to you seven times, but seventy times seven" (18:22). In other words, he believed that Jesus had set the limit for forgiveness at 70x7 or 490! He didn't realize that Jesus was not setting a limit when he said this, but expanding Peter's horizons. Peter obviously thought that seven times was pretty magnanimous, for he said: "Lord, how often shall my brother sin against me and I forgive him? As many as seven times?" Peter must have been dumbfounded when Jesus said "seventy times seven"!

AS WE FORGIVE

That's why it is important to follow these words of Jesus with the parable he told, the Parable of the Unforgiving Servant. This parable illustrates two things in Jesus' teaching about forgiveness. First, it shows us that the forgiveness we receive from God is linked directly to the forgiveness we give to others. In the Lord's Prayer he taught his disciples to pray: "And forgive us our debts, as we also have forgiven our debtors" (Matt. 6:12). In this parable he asks us to realize that if we want forgiveness, we must give forgiveness.

The servant in the story owes his master ten thousand talents, which scholars estimate to be roughly comparable to $1,000. Unable to pay this debt, the man begs his lord not to sell him and his family into slavery. He promises to eventually pay his master, but the master goes a step beyond and actually forgives him the debt. In turn, the debtor was owed one hundred denarii, or about $20 by a fellow servant. Although the latter begged for patience, the man who had been forgiven his debt of $1,000 refused to extend mercy to the man who owed him $20 and had him thrown into jail.

IF YOU DON'T FORGIVE

Secondly, this parable teaches us that there are no limits to forgiveness. The disparity between the $1,000 and $20 is meant by Jesus to indicate the difference between our indebtedness to God and our indebtedness to each other. If God can forgive such a huge debt, should we not be able to forgive a small one? So when the master learns of his servant's unforgiving treatment of the other servant, he comes to him and wrathfully condemns him to jail. "You wicked servant! I forgave you all that debt because you besought me; and should not you have had mercy on your fellow servant, as I had mercy on you?" (18:33). And just to make certain that we get the meaning of this parable, Jesus concludes: "So also my heavenly Father will do to everyone of you, if you do not forgive your brother from your heart" (18:35).

Farm Credit Bankers Have Long Been Recognized For Achievements In The Field.

Farm Credit bankers possess their share of prestigious achievement awards. But more often than not, the awards they're most proud of are the ones they've earned in, say, conservation, dairy, or veterinary science.

Not many bankers can say that.

That's because most Farm Credit loan officers were born and raised on farms. They grew up active in 4-H and FFA. Many even got their college degrees from ag schools.

What's more, every one of our loan officers goes through the toughest ag lending training program in America.

And because our loan officers understand farming as well as financing, they're not only smarter. They're faster. In fact, they have the power of loan approval equal to most bank presidents.

So stop by soon and talk with your nearby Farm Credit loan officer. Because whenever you need some extra help in your field, you'll want to work with the banker most accomplished in his.

Keep Sows Cycling on Time with...

Triple "F" Nutrition

Lactating sows must return to estrus quickly after weaning to maximize the number of pigs raised per sow per year.

A balanced Triple "F" sow nutrition program based on full-fat, extruded soybeans supplies sows with the levels of protein and energy necessary to minimize lactation weight loss.

Maintaining proper intake of all nutrients minimizes weaning to estrus interval and insures that the sow herd remains productive and profitable.

9391 Late-Group III. 39 Relative Maturity. A widely adapted, extremely high-yielding variety. Multi-race resistance to Phytophthora root rot contributes to excellent performance on heavy, poorly-drained soils. Fast emergence with good standability; excellent shattering resistance.

9442 Mid-Group IV. 44 Relative Maturity. A winning combination of excellent yield performance and excellent standability. Very adaptable to different soil types and row spacings. Fast emergence and smaller-sized seed for improved seed quality. This moderately branching plant has strong shattering resistance.

Reducing Losses In Silage Making

In my last two columns I discussed losses in hay and silage making, and, in the case of hay, how to reduce those losses. In today's column I'll look at some of the recent findings to reduce losses in silage making, with particular reference to perennial forages and small grains. In a later column I'll do the same for summer annuals such as corn, sorghum and similar crops.

Silage Additives

The basic objectives in silage making are quite simple: 1) to exclude oxygen from the ensiled mass as rapidly as possible, and 2) to reduce the p^H of the ensiled forage as quickly as possible through proper fermentation to a stable 3.5 - 5.0, depending on the crop and moisture. Accomplishing these objectives is not always as simple.

As in the case of hay, silage additives are not a substitute for good silage making practices, and I will summarize these later. But additives can be a helpful management tool, when properly used, in aiding and improving silage fermentation. In this column I can comment only briefly on several types of additives. Before you make a choice, you should discuss it with your dealer or other agricultural advisor.

The four most commonly used types of silage additives today are, 1) bacterial inoculants, 2) enzymes, 3) non-protein nitrogen sources, and 4) acids. Of these bacterial inoculants are reported to be the most widely used and fastest growing class of silage additives today, especially for hay crop silage.

The effectiveness of silage inoculants depend on the existing microbial production on the crop, the buffering capacity of the crop, and the quantity and quality of the microorganisms added to the inoculant. The naturally occurring lactic acid bacteria population is quite variable, especially on small grain crops and perennial crops, and may range from none to several million colony forming units per gram of wet forage. Thus, the addition of reliable inoculants, properly applied, can assure adequate quantities of desirable bacteria for a more efficient fermentation. And, while they are not always effective, their use can result in less nutrient loss, improve digestibility, less protein breakdown, and, thus, a silage with higher feed quality.

Enzymes, alone or in combination with inoculants, are getting more attention as possible silage additives as more is learned about them. Their primary function is to break down fiber components in the crop so that both dry matter intake and fiber utilization by beef and dairy cows will be improved. And while there is still much to be learned, to date the most consistent trend with enzyme- containing products is that they are much more effective on grass silages than on alfalfa. Most researchers feel that the use of enzymes in silage is likely to increase in the 90's as more is learned about them.

Non-protein nitrogen sources such as urea and anhydrous ammonia are commonly used for corn and other low crude protein crops such as forage sorghums and mature winter cereals. The main purpose of adding these NPN products is to raise the crude protein content of the silage and to improve aerobic stability. For various reasons the use of these products for hay crop silage is likely to be extremely limited.

The use of other additives such as organic acids is also very limited. If grass and legume crops are ensiled at moistures above 70% and sugar content is low, the use of acids may be helpful. But for many reasons their use in this country for silage making is likely to remain extremely small.

As stated earlier, silage additives are not a substitute for good silage making practices. Below is a brief run-down of rules for making hay crop silage in conventional silos (upright or horizontal) that have stood the test for time:

1. Start with a crop of high quality.
2. Harvest at the proper stage of maturity - full bud to early bloom for legumes; early heading for perennial grasses; late boot to heading for winter and spring grains (except rye - late boot).
3. Field dry to 65% moisture or less to produce either a wilted or low-moisture silage.
4. Chop at correct length - 3/8" theoretical cut for perennial legumes and grasses, slightly finer for cereal crops. Keep chopper knives sharp.
5. Provide a tight silo to exclude air and water.
6. Use covered wagons to prevent excessive leaf and other losses in the field.
7. Fill silo rapidly and pack thoroughly.
8. Use a suitable seal to exclude air.
9. Leave silo undisturbed until ready to use the feed.

Round bale silage is gaining favor for some producers and offers some advantages in terms of investment and labor. The resulting silage can be of similar quality to silage stored in more conventional structures. However, unless extreme care is taken to package and store round bales properly, storage losses are likely to be higher than with other storage systems.

Dairylea Sponsors Annual Young Farmer Seminar

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — An informational seminar for Dairylea Young Farmers is being sponsored by Dairylea Cooperative Inc. on March 22-23 at the Sheraton Inn, in Liverpool, N.Y.

This two-day seminar focuses on "Building for the Future" and gives young farmers (ages 20-45) the opportunity to broaden their industry knowledge and learn about the current progress of their Cooperative.

A highlight of the program will be Dairylea President Clyde Rutherford's address on future changes and opportunities facing dairy farmers. There will also be informational sessions on family relationships, environmental concerns and effective farm management during a low-price cycle.

Discussion groups will address bovine somatotropin (BST), bulk milk distribution, and Dairylea's wholly-owned insurance subsidiary, Agri-Service Agencies Inc.

Attendees also will have the opportunity to interact with other young farmers and discuss common practices and concerns.

Dairylea, a Syracuse-based dairy cooperative with 2,300 farmer members throughout the Northeast, participates in a milk marketing network stretching from Maine to Maryland to Ohio.

Agriscience Teachers Nominated

WASHINGTON, DC — The National FFA Organization's Agriscience Teacher of the Year award nominees from Pennsylvania have been named. These individuals were selected by Pennsylvania state agricultural education leaders for their dedication to young people pursuing careers in agriculture. The teachers nominated to represent Pennsylvania are: Paul Heasley, of Danville, who teaches at Danville Area Senior High School in Danville; Ronald Frederick, of Blue Ball, who teaches at Twin Valley High School in Elverson; James Tatro, of Philadelphia, who teaches at Walter Biddle Saul High School in Philadelphia; and Donald McNutt, of Womelsdorf, and Stephen Miller, of Robesonia who both teach at Conrad Weiser High School in Robesonia.

The Agriscience Teacher of the Year award program recognizes outstanding agriculture instructors who emphasize agriscience and new technologies in their curricula. Teachers are acknowledged for their innovative instruction which sparks student's interest in the scientific aspects of agriculture including biology, the environment, engineering and agribusiness.

"Quality science education is vitally important to students wishing to succeed in today's careers. The work teachers do to prepare students for the many opportunities in the agriculture industry assists U.S. competitiveness in the world marketplace," said Edward C. MacEwen, vice president, Corporate Communications, GTE Corporation.

The Agriscience Teacher of the Year award program is sponsored by the GTE Foundation as a special project of the National FFA Foundation.

FFA is a national organization of 387,042 members in 7,634 local chapters preparing for careers in the science, business and technology of agriculture. Local, state and national activities and award programs provide opportunities for students to apply knowledge and skills acquired through agricultural education. BIRD-IN-HAND (Lancaster Co.) — Leaders of the Atlantic Dairy Cooperative locals of District No. 5 met last week to review the 1990 business year, present awards and elect officers for 1991.

Atlantic Dairy Cooperative is a relatively new organization in that it was formed several years ago with the merger of Lehigh and Interstate cooperatives.

District No. 5 locals consist of Millersville, West Lampeter, Paradise and Witmer locals. District No. 5 officers are Melvin Eby, president; Rodney Denlinger, vice president; and Nelson Habecker, secretary-treasurer.

In the West Lampeter local: Rodger Mills was elected president; J. Martin Harnish, vice president; John Howard, secretary-treasurer; and delegates are Robert Gochenaur III and Darrell Martin. Alternate delegates are J. Nelson Harnish and Andrew Mellinger.

In the Millersville local: Joe Hess, president; Richard Rohrer, vice president; David Garber, secretary-treasurer; and delegates are Glenn Burkholder and Elvin Hess. Alternates are David Charles and Glenn Rohrer. On the hauling committee is Glenn Binkley.

In the Witmer local: Mervin H. Bare, president; Raleigh Rhodes, vice president; Harvey Heller, secretary-treasurer; delegates are John Landis and Harvey Heller. Alternates are Mervin Bare and Raleigh Rhodes.

In the Paradise local: Melvin Eby, president; Daniel Stoltzfus, vice president; Robert Bowman, secretary-treasurer; delegates are Melvin Beiler and Rodney Denlinger. Alternates are Eugene Lapp and David Stoltzfus.

Key speaker was James Fraher, economist for ADC. Fraher said that the outlook for the dairy producer may be negative for the short term, but it's "Not all gloom and doom."

Fraher said he could see good things coming out of the current depressed milk price situation.

He said that with Atlantic being in business for as long as it has — including the years before the smaller cooperatives joined together to form Atlantic — it proves that being a member of a cooperative works and will continue to provide strength for the individual through the power of the group.

From an analytical viewpoint, however, Fraher said that with dairy producers becoming more and more subject to market influences it will up to the dairyman to learn how to adjust to flucuating prices, which can be expected to be normal in coming years.

He said because of the dependency on the market, it will not take much of a change in the balance of supply and demand to make a big difference in price.

"Last spring, sales were 7 percent above sales the year before that," Fraher said. "Some of that was inventory building by cheese companies and others, but see long term strength a lot of people bought cheese and powder."

Then suddenly, with reserve stocks by private industry built up, sales of product started to not quite meet the expected rate.

And meanwhile, California milk production came on strong and was mostly used in powder, thus collapsing the price of milk, he said.

"We got a bigger change in price that change in supply and demand," Fraher said. "But it's not as out of balance as it was in the mid-1980s."

For his predictions, Fraher said he can see milk prices slipping more; about 30- to 40-cents more before hitting rock bottom.

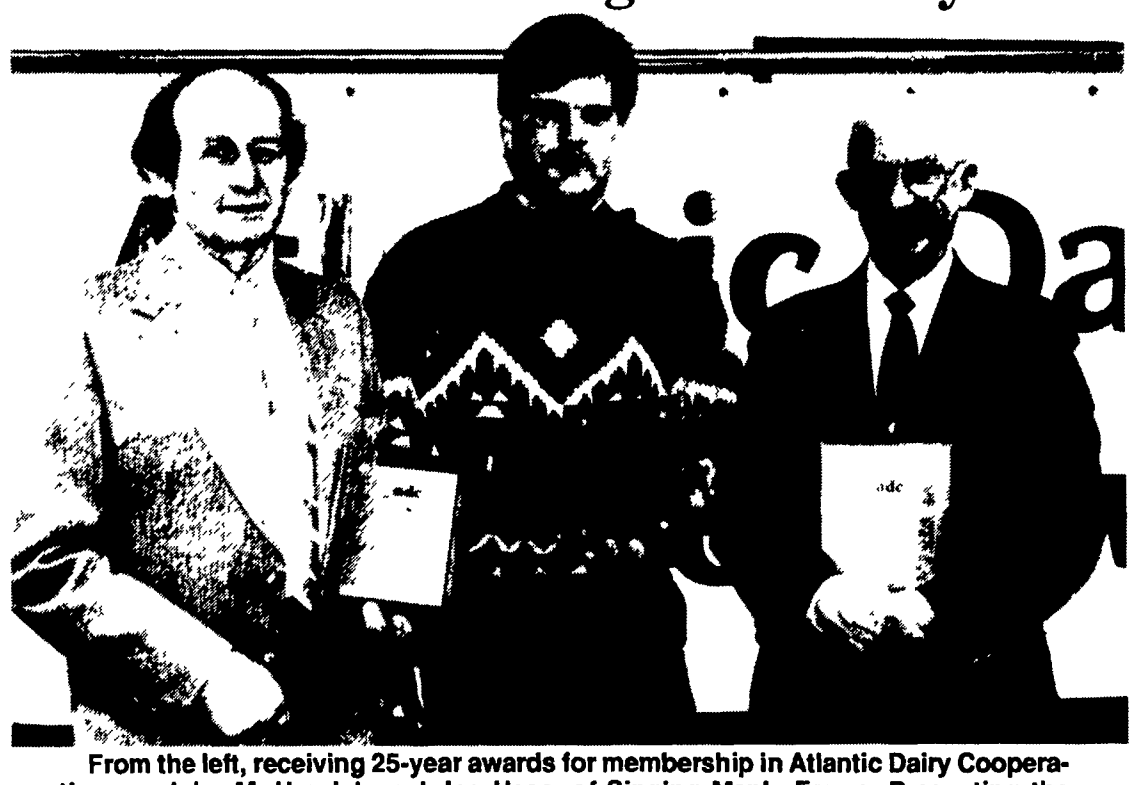
However, Fraher said that the dread of $10 milk is not going to happen for several reasons, but basically because of premiums and over order prices, it will not go below $13 for Class I and $10 for Class II. The resulting blend price he predicted will not go below $12.50.

Furthermore, because of normal seasonal supply-demand swings, he said he expects to see an increas of $1 to $1.50 per hundredweight by fall.

He said the average for the year in Federal Order 4 will be about $12.50 and blend price in Federal Order 2 will be close to that.

Furthermore, while Fraher said it is to too early to predict trends in the price, he expects that by June to see a decrease in production, because cow numbers are down.

And even though the production decrease should be relatively small, "I think we're going to see more response to price."



From the left, receiving 25-year awards for membership in Atlantic Dairy Cooperative are John M. Harnish and Joe Hess, of Singing Maple Farms. Presenting the awards and holding up a quality award to be given to Glenn E. Burkholder, is retiring field representative Andrew Marvin.

He said that with dairy products, being in an elastic supply and demand, big prices changes will occur with little change in supply or demand.

It will be mid-1992 before any real recovery, he said.

The economic position of Atlantic Dairy Co-op is a mirror of the economic position for the individual dairyman.

Raising corn was never an easy task. But raising it with the side effects caused by some herbicides makes it tougher than ever.
Fortunately, there's Laddok® herbicide. Laddok controls 28 different broadleaves, including velvetleaf, cocklebur and pigweed.
Laddok even helps you avoid problems other herbicides cause, like stalk brittleness, damage to brace roots and vapor drift injury to beans.
So if you're looking for a way to control broadleaves while managing atrazine and preventing unwanted side effects, try Laddok.
And make growing a bumper crop your only real concern.

In Response To Falling Milk Prices

Penn State Extension Dairy Specialists have prepared a list of suggestions for dairy producers to consider in response to the recent decline of milk prices.

Here are tips from Dick Adams, Bill Heald, Jud Heinrichs, Steve Spencer, Mike O'Connor and Larry Specht for your consideration.

DICK ADAMS
Feed Cost Reductions

Overall view: Current price relationships for concentrates and forage and anticipated new milk prices of $12 for 3.5% milk call for no skimping on rate of concentrate feeding. A grain to milk ratio of 1:2½ or 1:3 certainly should be within reason if it is needed to balance the forage ration. Nevertheless there are some things that could be done to reduce feed costs on many farms, especially those with a cash flow problem due to lower milk prices and other reasons. These include the following:

1. Buy wisely - Get prices from at least two or three sources for items needed in volume. Take service, quality, nutritional assistance into consideration before deciding on a supplier. Be sure prices are for comparable items and on the same basis regarding delivery, discounts for volume, cash, etc.

2. Maintain reasonably low inventories of feeds and ingredients - This makes more cash available for other needs and helps protect against a fluctuating market.

3. Use a meal or pellet rather than a coarse-texture feed - Meals and often pellets may cost less than the same formula in a coarser and perhaps less digestible form.

4. Consider use of a urea-containing feed in a well-balanced ration - Soluble protein and rumen undegradable protein must be at proper levels in the total ration, as well as mineral and readily available energy content (NSC). More often can be used in a ration containing higher levels of corn silage, hay and dry corn than with a haylage and high-moisture corn diet.

5. Reduce forage and concentrate waste - Some farms run considerably over the 5 to 10% feeding out loss generally encountered with good feeding and handling practices.

6. Switch from a farm or custom-mixed concentrate to a manufactured feed if it is more economical and meets the needs of your herd - Often custom mixes cost more than a manufactured feed.

7. Try decreasing protein intake moderately - Some good producing herds can use an appreciably lower protein ration than others. Check response when lowering protein the equivalent of 2% on a finished dairy feed basis.

8. Try discontinuing buffers or limiting their use to the first 2 to 3 months of the lactation. Cows may not respond profitably on a ration high in alfalfa which is a good natural buffer.

9. Determine if fat feeding is profitable in your herd by response to its removal - It does not pay to use high-fat rations in some herds whether it is from oilseeds or added fats.

10. Consider use of commodities and/or food processing wastes - More advantageous in herds of about 100 cows and higher.

11. Increase forage intake and decrease concentrate intake in a well-balanced ration if cash flow is critical.

12. Use sour colostrum, waste milk or milk replacer for calf feeding.

13. Wean calves at four weeks, if they are eating 1 to 1½ lbs. daily of a good calf starter plus forage.

Make only one change at a time to improve evaluation. Decrease concentrate intakes gradually at not over 3 to 4 lb. daily during a period of a week.

BILL HEALD
Lower Costs of Producing Milk

1. Switch from DHIR or DHIA to AM/PM testing.

2. Withhold high SCC cow's milk from bulk tank milk to receive quality bonuses.

3. Remove cows from the herd that don't produce enough milk to pay for their feed and maintenance costs.

4. Don't breed cows that are to be culled.

5. Keep only the best heifer calves and sell the rest before weaning.

6. Reduce culling of milking herd to 25-35%.

7. Sell cows that continue to be infected with Staph aureus after dry cow therapy and freshening.

8. Shoot for a 50-60 days dry period.

9. Freshen heifers at 22-25 months.

10. Design a mastitis control program to lower SCC by ½ or linear score by 1.

11. Determine desired lactation average milk production. Divide that number by 200 for cows and 225 for heifers to determine peak milk. Manage cows to reach that level of peak milk on first or second test.

12. Look for Holstein cows with protein tests below 2.9%. These cows are low in energy or thin. Feed them more energy to correct body condition score or protein test.

13. Look for Holstein cows with fat test below 3.3 or above 4.3. They probably have a feeding problem that is reducing production.

14. Cows with a somatic cell count score greater than 4 are probably infected and indicates that the mastitis control program can be improved.

JUD HEINRICHS
How to Lower Replacement Feed Costs

1. Feed discarded and waste milk colostrum.

2. Don't overfeed liquid feeds to young calves.

3. Feed adequate forages - kinds and amount.

4. Watch costs of purchased feeds.

5. Forage test and feed program.

6. Watch grouping of animals - numbers and the age-weight spread.

7. Check amounts of grain fed - 2 to 3 lbs.

8. Feed waste feeds from cows.

9. Keep weight gains steady.

10. Feed ionophors.

STEVE SPENCER
Increasing Income and/or Cutting Costs

1. Lower Somatic Cell Count (SCC). Use proven teat dips and dry treat all quarters of all cows.

2. Cull low producers.

3. Keep milking equipment in top operating condition. Buy used when possible.

4. Consider 3X milking. This can provide 15-20% increase in milk production. Make sure labor scheduling can handle it.

5. Invest in a heat reclaimer. Payback is quick on most farms.

6. Use proper amount of chemicals for cleaning and sanitizing. Don't over-use.

MIKE O'CONNOR
Reproductive Management

Here are a few topics in the area of reproductive management that dairy herd managers may want to consider in planning to reduce expenses.

1. Age at 1st calving - Strive for an average of 24 months. It is estimated to cost at least $1.50 per day to extend the age at first calving beyond 24 months. Too many dairy farms are losing $100 per heifer because of delayed first calving.

2. Production per cow per year decreases as calving interval increases beyond 13 months.

3. Inseminate cows in standing heat - Inseminations based on secondary signs of heat result in lower conception rate. This increases semen costs and extends calving interval. A study using herds with average fertility showed at least $35 net return per cow per year with the implementation of a systematic heat detection program versus poor heat detection procedures.

4. Cull chronic repeat breeding cows - evaluate the benefits of keeping cows that have been inseminated three or more times.

5. Use reproductive hormones judiciously - carefully evaluate your use of drugs for inducing heat and ovulation.

LARRY SPECHT
Genetic Management Tips

1. Buy only as much semen as you will use in the next six months.

2. Buy semen from a reliable source. Know your supplier! Semen that doesn't settle cows is the most expensive kind.

3. Use sires with reliable information. Progeny tested sires from established AI programs are your best bet.

4. Pay attention to PTA dollars for milk, fat and protein. Use of this economic index will give dairymen the best return per dollar spent.

5. If you are on DHI or AM/PM test - consider signing up for the young sires that are being progeny tested by the AI units. This program offers semen at greatly reduced prices and provides genetics that are equal to the average AI sire currently in service.

Atlantic Dairy Co-op

Just as last year was a record year for the dairyman, it was also a record year for the cooperative.

"We were making good operations. Operating in the black will continue, but with production 4 percent ahead of a year earlier, we will see a slow reaction from manufacturing side.

"They have inventory somewhat, but overall have good sales We feel confident there will be a resumption of an increase in demand. Biggest thing we have going is the price of milk and dairy production at the consumer's level.

"In January 1991, based on 1982 to 1984 prices, the cost of all food to the consumer had increased 36 percent while the cost of dairy products increased only 25 percent. It tells a story of the dairy industry.

"Fluid milk is only up 23 percent (in price). But actually down 3 percent from a year ago.

"We're gonig to see a benefit from that," he said.

Also, Fraher said that the reduction of federalo involvement in the dairy industry, a decrease of some 80 percent, is more or less responsible for the volatility of the milk price.

And while some authority to manage supply is included within the 1990 Farm Bill, specific means have not been issued, nor agreed upon.

"We can't depend on the government," he said.

But if one looks at the demand for over-order premiums and the ability of mangufacturers to pay them to the producers, "It represents a basic agreement between producers and manufacturers — they are agreeing to pay more," Fraher said.

Location of Atlantic Dairy members also provides a benefit, Fraher said. "Over the long pull, we still have a location advantage. We have the largest immediate market in the United States. We're looking at $12.50 milk. The Minnesota-Wisconsin prices is below ours and California is below $11."

Pa.'s Rural Economy Moves Toward Service Industries

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.)— Following years of decline in the agricultural, manufacturing and mining industries, Pennsylvania's rural economy now relies on the service sector for 56 percent of employment. But further economic diversification depends on the ability of rural counties to maintain or improve physical infrastructure, social services, and education.

Dr. Stephen M. Smith, rural economic development expert and associate professor of agricultural economics in Penn State's College of Agriculture, will be one of several Penn State faculty members speaking at a conference entitled "Pennsylvania's Agricultural Economy: Trends, Issues and Prospects," to be held March 20-21 in the Keller Conference Center.

Pennsylvania has the largest rural population in the U.S., with more than three million residents living in non-metropolitan areas. "Rural does not mean agriculture or farm," said Smith. "You cannot understand the problems of rural economies and people today if you equate rural with agriculture or with other traditional non-agricultural industries such as mining or forestry."

In fact, Smith said, more people are employed in agriculture-related industries in Pennsylvania's urban counties than in its rural areas. And the loss of rural manufacturing jobs from 1975 to 1987 was more than four times greater than farm employment declines in rural counties.

Smith said the trend toward a service-based rural economy is likely to continue. "One reason is the nature of the modern economy, where technological change continues to decrease the need for labor in manufacturing and resource exploitation," Smith said.

The increasingly large population of rural elderly also creates a demand for social, health, and medical services. In addition, a rural emphasis on tourism and recreation leads to service sector jobs in the lodging, restaurant, retail, and entertainment industries.

Smith said the availability of non-agricultural employment has allowed more farmers to remain in farming. "In almost 70 percent of the state's farm families, either the operator or the spouse works off the farm," said Smith. "Off-farm income accounts for two-thirds of taxable farm family income in Pennsylvania."

But Smith says rural areas must diversify further to remain economically competitive with urban counties. Success in competing for new rural industries, he said, means improving transportation, water and waste disposal systems; building a modern communications base; and improving social, public, and private services. "An educated work force supported by proper modern infrastructure can provide rural communities with much more flexibility," he said.

Smith emphasizes that attracting new business to rural areas should not be done at the expense of traditional agriculture and resource-based industries.

The conference on Pennsylvania's agricultural economy also will feature discussions on environmental issues related to agriculture, the effect of international trade agreements on the agricultural economy, food and health issues for consumers, and other topics. For more information, contact the Office of Conferences and Short Courses, 306 Agricultural Administration Building, The Pennsylvania State University, University Park, PA 16802, (814) 865-8301.

Lebanon 4-H Livestock Club Holds Banquet

PRESCOTT (Lebanon Co.) — The Lebanon County 4-H Livestock Club held is annual recognition banquet Tuesday night at Prescott Fire Hall.

The annual banquet is held to recognize the achievements of the youth who participate in the county 4-H program and to name outstanding members.

Receiving the outstanding senior member award was Daryl Bomgardner who showed the 1991 Farm Show grand champion market swine and numerous other top swine at shows at Timonium, Md., the county fair, roundup, at KILE, and the Ohio State Fair.

Bomgardner, 17, is the son of Charlie and Marlene Bomgardner and has also participated in judging contests with PSU during state days, and in Lancaster and York counties. He attended an oral reasons workshop, and also entered in the stockmen's competition at KILE.

He said his extracurricular activities include being a member of his FFA parlimentary procedure team, high school basketball, track, Honor Society, and involvement with his church youthgroup, softball and volleyball teams and the Leaders Corps.

During the banquet, Bomgardner presented a picture of his Farm Show champion hog to Carlos R. Leffler, who had purchased the animal for a record price and then donated it back to Bomgardner so that the youth could continue to use it in his breeding program.

Receiving an oustanding junior member award was Jon Harnish, 12, son of Guy and Carol Harnish. John was involved with beef and swine projects and participated in KILE; the state Farm Show; county, regional and state judging contests; the York Fair; was a member of the Pork Bowl team; and took first place in the age group at the county fair and roundup for swine and took second place in his age group for beef production.

In addition to 4-H involvement, Harnish has participated in the Youth to Youth Feeder Pig Sale; the Berks County-Southeast District Cattleman's Association; the Pennsylvania Jr. Limousin Association; and in various fund raising events.

Receiving an outstanding rookie member award was Katie Moyer, 10, daughter of Greg and Susan Moyer.

Moyer received a 100 on her project book and took first place in blocking and a second in showmanship at the county fair. She also received a trophy as an honor 4-Her. Her projects included market lamb and blocking and showmanship.

She competed in the county fair, and participated in a sheep shearing school, barbeque ticket sales project, a lamb promotion at Fox's Market and helpd with the clean-up force at the county fair.

In addition, Moyer is a cheerleader for Ebenezer Football Association, a member of her church choir, a violinist, is involved with church musicals and also is a member of another 4-H group.

Also during the banquet, special recognition was given to Hatfield Quality Meats for support of the club as a consistent buyer, packer bids, donations for pork promotions, financial support of the pork bowl, both local and state.

Kenneth Winebark, livestock extension agent in Lebanon County made recognition of the Friends of 4-H, and also gave recognition to those whose animals performed well at the state Farm Show, in special judging contests and to those who captured top places in county competitions during the past year.

Special recognition was made to the members of the county Pork Bowl team who had won high team overall in the state. The 1990 A team consisted of Danny Atkins, Jon Harnish, Amy Harnish and John Risser. The B team was made up of Brian Kreider, Roxanne Kirst, Jason Krall and Katie Lefever.

In the state shepherds contest, high individual was Benj Bow, 2nd was Amy Smith and third was Jenny Wenger.

Also, lebanon County 4-H livestock youth took three of the top seven places in the state Farm Show for lambs with the highest rate of gain. The top was an entry from Becky Kleinfelter, with other top places by Amy and Alice Smith.

Also presented to parents, leaders and buyers were buttoneers, in gratitude for their continued support and dedication of the county's widely recognized 4-H livestock program.

From left, Daryl Bomgardner, Jon Harnish and Katie Moyer are named Lebanon County 4-H Club Livestock outstanding senior, junior and rookie members.

Kenneth Winebark, Lebanon County livestock extension agent, presents an award of appreciation to representatives of Hatfield Quality Meats for years of support.

made with fiberglass, the material of the future — and proven in the past —

The Fiberdome chute is designed and engineered to be installed on most types of silos. Its structure allows it to withstand the toughest beating the weather elements or silo unloading systems can possibly dish out.

The chute is constructed in full 7 ½' sections to minimize the number of joints. Connecting joints have a 2 ½" tongue and groove design to keep feed in and water out. The large ribbed construction adds stability and strength.

Fiberglass is durable, corrosion-proof, attractive and translucent, allowing sunlight to pass through. Sunlight quickly dries interior moisture in the chute The hard gleaming gelcote surface will remain for many years.

State FFA Officers Tour Stops In Ephrata

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.)—The State FFA officers visited the Lancaster Farming offices, art and camera departments and the press room last Friday while the latest issue was in production. And after the tour, they answered a few questions about how they saw the present and future of agriculture as it related to their experience.

On the question of how their peers view FFA, farming, and their involvement, many of the answers reflected a feeling that students outside the ag education system did not understand agriculture and therefore ridiculed the students and the system. But most of these FFA leaders did not seem to take personal offense.

NEVIN HERSCH, western region vice president: "Many students look at FFA and ag education as the place where farmers are. They do not understand the benefits of FFA or the need for agriculture."

MATTHEW ZERBY, state reporter: "Because of the fact that they don't fully realize what the FFA is, many students ridicule the organization. However, FFA is the best program in today's school systems to teach leadership, public speaking and common sense."

LARRY FEESER, JR., state chaplain: "Pressures that are ag related are difficult to explain. They just have to relate with the problem head on."

JASON FRANKE, eastern region vice president: "I feel that there is a lot of pressure against youth

The state FFA officers visited the Lancaster Farming offices and production facilities last Friday morning to see how the paper is printed. In the photo, the group sees the Goss Community Presses in operation. To print 49,000 copies for the subscription list, it takes about three and one-half hours and 30 tons of news print. Students are, left to right, Larry Feeser Jr. state chaplin; Matt Zerby, state reporter; John Rishel, state sentinel; Eric Marshall, state treasurer; Jenny Brown, north central vice president; Greg Harnish, state vice president; Toni Gomez, state secretary; Nevin Hersch III, western vice president; Keith Hay, state president; Jason Franke, eastern vice president; Larry Smeltz, south central vice president. Sheila Reiner, Pennsylvania Association executive secretary, is in center; and Everett Newswanger, managing editor, is at far left.

involved in agriculture from both peers and adults. But I feel that the pressure stems from a lack of knowledge on those individuals because if you mention agriculture, the only thing they think of is farming. They don't think about aquaculture, hydroponics, veterinary medicine—all the new wave agriculture."

When asked to discuss the effect of new technical advances in agriculture over the next few years, the students listed additional use of computers and crops that don't need chemical sprays as things they expected for agriculture. Some said there would be fewer farmers and the people who will be farming 10 years from now will be more efficient.

ANTOINETTE GOMEZ, state secretary: "Technological advances are needed by agriculture because just as any industry, ag must develop to the wants and needs of our society. This can be done by marketing the product of our toil, creating equipment which is more efficient and makes the farmer's job less time consuming, and opening up foreign trade opportunities.

JOHN RISHEL, state sentinel: "I feel the small family farms are doomed unless they start working like large technically advanced coporations. You can't do things the way they were done when you were young."

JENNIFER BROWN, north central region vice president: "Agriculture will be more of a cooporative industry. I hate to say that the number of family farms will be reduced because I live on one, but they will. Agriculture will be targeted more toward the city.

On the question of how important is the ag curculiumn in the school system, the young visitors were divided. Some said it was important because there would always be agriculture in the society. Others took the view that it often did not prepare the student for advanced education or even for work in the "real world".

KEITH HAY, state president: "Students have the opportunity to have hands on training that no other program offers. FFA members have many more experience opportunities than regular high school students.

ERIC MARSHALL, state treasurer: "Agriculture is the most important part of a school's curriculumn. It teaches not only agriculture, but also, math, science, history, English and many skills which are needed after school.

LARRY SMELTZ, south central vice president: "Agricultural education is very important to me because it gave me direction in life to where I was headed."

GREGORY HARNISH, state vice president: "Programs like football, wrestling, national honor society and band rank well above the agriculture program.

What has ag education and FFA done for you? Where do you want to be in five to ten years from now?

HERSCH: "In FFA I have been helped because I have gained self-confidence, discovered my talents, and learned to communicate. I have been able to develop a positive character to be ready for life.

"In five years, I plan to be out of school actively pursuing either a career in motivational public speaking or full-time Christian work."

ZERBY: The FFA has given me more than any other program or organization that I've ever been involved with, and it has given me the ability to live my life to its fullest potential.

"I plan to go into an agricultural career field."

FEESER: "The leadership is the main point because you only learn so much on your own.

"My goals are to become a teacher of math or ag and also take control of the family farm and continue to raise show hogs for "Feeser's Hog Farm."

FRANKE: "I have gained a future that is very bright because I am a more confident and responsible person as well as a person who is more wise to the world around him in all aspects. And the best part of all, I have made the best friends n the whole world this past year serving as an FFA state officer.

I want to be either teaching agricultural education or operating a dairy farm somewhere in Pennsylvania."

GOMEZ: "I have developed self-confidence, leadership, and desirable personality characteristics through my involvement in FFA. It's allowed me to be a positive person and to influence others to set goals and strive toward them.

"Five years from now I see myself entering my first year of graduate school for a masters in animal science or entering the University of Pennsylvania Veterinary School."

RISHEL: "I have experienced people and places that I originally would not have met or seen.

"I hope to acquire my own dairy farm."

BROWN: "I have developed leadership, and received a fantastic overview of agriculture. I have received the inspiration to study agriculture in school and never to limit myself in what I can do.

"For the future, as I see it, I have two options: 1. in graduate school working for a PHD in my major, agriculture education, so I can teach at the college level or 2. in law school studying agricultural law."

HAY: "I have developed leadership and the ability to set goals. FFA has taken me to sights and lands where I would never have gone without it.

"I hope to be involved in sales or service to agriculturalists to make agriculture the most profitable."

MARSHALL: "Through the FFA, I have gained knowledge of our economy and government. I have gained self-confidence and self-esteem."

"Ten years from now, I see myself owning my own business and being successful in it."

SMELTZ: "I have met many new people and have developed many new friendships which will last a lifetime."

"In five years I see myself working in an ag economics field and someday will return to the farm."

HARNISH: "I have gained a sense of direction and have been made more aware of the world around me. I have learned the qualities of cooperation and responsibility."

"I want to continue to work for an agricultural marketing firm as a commodity futures broker."

The FFA state officer tour started in Philadelphia on Wednesday and came to Lancaster Thursday evening. After the visit to Lancaster Farming and a working session at a local motel, the state officers returned home Friday afternoon. Sheila Reiner, state FFA executive secretary, was on tour with the group. Mary Jo Cancelmo, executive director of the Pennsylvania FFA Foundation, and Jim Kerr, principal of the Walter Biddle Saul High School in Philadelphia, provided leadership Philadelphia visits.

Accelerated Lambing Needed

have instituted at their Hawk Meadow Farm puts a 400 lambing percent goal well with reach of their ability to obtain it.

"One of the easiest and least understood methods of increasing profits from sheep is to use accelerated lambing or STAR system," said Mende. "This system of breeding and lambing was developed some years ago by Brian McGee of Cornell University.

"The basic concept of accelerated lambing is that you turn the ram in at fixed intervals during the year. While this extends the lambing season, it also means that you will get more lambs per year from each ewe."

Hawk Meadow Farm was stocked with 12 ewes and a ram eight years ago. Some of the original individuals are still in 200 head flock that is now managed on the accelerated lambing program. Mende says many people who come to the farm to buy ewe lambs express an interest in the accelerated program, but they often say they don't understand how to do it.

Mende says in their program, there are five breeding and lambing sessions each year. Breeding and lambing coincide. Approximately one-third of an established accelerated lambing flock will lamb during a particular session. You capitalize on the ewe's innate ability and don't need to alter light cycles, use progesterone sponges, teaser rams, or any of the multitude of gimmicks people say you need to use.

The chart with this article shows the breeding and lambing intervals. To get started, (if you do not already have sheep), buy ewes or ewe lambs from an accelerated lambing flock. Choose lambs sired by a ram who is a proven out-of-season breeder and sires multiple births of healthy lambs year round.

Ask to see the flock production records. Choose ewes that have a history of unassisted births, milk production to raise twins with an average daily gain of at least .65 lbs. per day from birth to 100 days. Look for lambing intervals of 175 to 240 days, and a lifetime lambing average of greater than 300 percent.

Mende says that if you already have ewes, don't sell them, but put them on the STAR system and cull with abandon.

You will have to decide what your culling criteria should be. This will change as the flock's productivity improves.

To get started, save ewe lambs only out of your top-producing ewes. Ewes must lamb by 14 months of age. Cull any that don't lamb in this time frame.

Out of the ewes that have lambed by 14 months, cull those that do not lamb by 11 months later. Out of those that remain, cull any that do not lamb eight months later.

At the end of two years, cull any mature ewe that has not lambed at least three times within that two-year period.

What you are trying to do is to establish a flock that will consistently lamb at least every eight months. With time and strict culling, lambing intervals can be shortened to 6.5 to 7.4 months.

For the STAR system to be most profitable, the ewes must consistently have multiple births. Th Mendes say their Finn cross ewes can produce eight or more live lambs in two years, but the increased profits from these ewes are only attained with more work.

"The biggest reason people abandon accelerated lambing is because their ewes don't perform," Mende said. "And the reason they don't perform is because the shepherd tries to feed them the same as he would a once-a-year lambing flock. On an accelerated lambing schedule, there is no "flushing." Ewes must be kept in breeding condition at all times."

To be kept as a replacement in the Hawk Meadow flock, the lambs must be from ewes that have a 400 lambing percent. Even breeding stock sold to commercial flocks must come from ewes with a 300 lambing percent.

In the future, the Mende's hope to have two alternating commercial flocks on the STAR accceleratated lambing system. This would give them a crop of lambs every month. And their altament goal is to be able to cull at the 300 to 325 lambing percent range.

"Over the last three years, articles on profitable sheep raising in Lancaster Farming have been few and far between," Mende said. "Most of these articles are long on theory and short on practical know-how, written by extension specialists and veterinarians who earned their degrees in the lab and not in the barn.

"Those who elect to try accelerated lambing will find it works and can increase profits," Mende said. "The more you work with the system, the more you will find you want to optimize it to yield higher profits."

Lilac Offspring Top Md.

Burt Stewart holds the halter of C Cathland Lilac, multiple award winning cow owned by Mary Louis Wilcom and Greg Wilcom of Gay Ridge Holsteins. Two of Lilac's offspring sold for more than $40,000 at the Maryland Holstein Convention Sale, setting new sale records.

2E, 97, and holds many outstanding show credits. Among top honors were those won at the 1988 and 1989 All American, 1988 All Canadian 5-year-old, Nominated All-American 1990, First Dry Aged Cow, Central and Eastern National 1990, Grand Champion Maryland State Show 1990, Grand Champion New York Spring Show-1990.

Her DHIR record at 5 years, 2 days on a 305-day lactation was 34,990 pounds of milk comprised of 4.7 percent, or 1,681 pounds, of fat, and 3.3 percent, or 1,164 pounds of protein.

The bidding continued to climb to record-setting levels.

Then, for one last time, auctioneer Remsburg asked if there were any more bids, and the gavel came down, sealing the record price of $20,100.

The third-high selling animal in the sale was Pintail Point Mark Diane-ET. She was bought for $10,000 by Dr. Ralph Warn from Port Pierre, Ontario.

A consignment by Pintail Point Farm, Queenstown, Md., the 5-month-old heifer calf was sired by Walkway Chief Mark from a dam that, as a 3-year-old, claimed a VG 89 point classification and a PTA of +1987m, +66f, +61p. The dam also had a DHIR record at 2years, 7 months, on a 365-day lactation, of 29,780 pounds of milk, with 3.6 percent, or 1,078 pounds, of butterfat, and 3.2 percent, or 956 pounds, of protein.

Even though milk prices are at a 13-year low, this year's sale averaged more than last year. The top 10 animals averaged $7,900, and the average of 58 head was $3,178.45.

Dr. Lee Majeskie, donated one animal to Maryland Dairy Youth Programs, which made for the 58th head to be sold. Without that animal, the sale averaged $3,214 on 57 head.

"A pretty good sale," said sales manager Norman Hill, in an understated manner.

PEA To Hold 2nd Meeting, Reports Growth

MEDINA, Ohio — Since the first annual meeting of the Producers' Equalization Agency (PEA) was held a year ago, the dairy producers' pricing organization has signed over 3,000 dairy farmers in eastern Ohio and western Pennsylvania to its cause.

When over 60 delegates assemble for the second annual meeting held at the Ramada Inn in West Middlesex, on March 21, they will hear how PEA plans to sign up the additional dairy farmers it needs to put pricing in the hands of milk producers in F.O. #36.

In addition to the official tasks of the delegates, such as voting on a by-law change, they will meet guests from various agricultural agencies including Pennsylvania Farmers Association and the Ohio Farm Bureau. A representative from the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board, will explain the regulatory agency's purpose and current programs. Nationally renowned Bob Jacobson, ag-economist from Ohio State University, will provide an update on the current dairy industry and give his projections for the coming year.

According to John Siglow, general manager of PEA, the meeting will give delegates an opportunity to exchange views and experiences relative to the success in recruiting independent dairy farmers to join PEA. Siglow points out that dairy support levels have dropped to $9.90 per cwt., 3.5 percent butterfat.

This, coupled with an increasing national milk supply, has made the ability of dairy farmers to price their milk more critical than a year ago.

Poultry Industry Must Find Ways To Control Campylobacter

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — One Lancaster County man remembers the time he improperly handled raw poultry. He recalls not using plastic gloves, not cleaning his hands, and then eating food contaminated by bacteria on his fingers.

And he remembers the pain of the severe intestinal infection that followed.

The man vows to do whatever is necessary to keep from getting the illness again. But his encounter with the infection is symptomatic of what experts call a problem that outweighs the current Salmonella uproar in the poultry industry.

This time, poultry producers, packagers, and food industry workers are confronting a bacteria called Campylobacter jejuni, present in virtually all poultry. The bacteria can cause a devastating flu-like illness in humans.

Importance of education

Steve Knabel, assistant professor of food science at Penn State, spoke to about 30 poultry industry representatives at a meeting on Monday. Knabel stressed the importance of educating the poultry producer, handler, and consumer about the nature and control of Campylobacter.

"Campylobacter is now recognized as a significant food-borne pathogen for the last 10 years," said Knabel. "And it's the most common bacteria cause of acute intestinal infection in humans, exceeding the rates of illness caused by Salmonella and shigella."

The organism was first identified in 1913. In 1957, researchers determined it caused acute enteritis (inflammation of the intestines) and high temperatures were responsible for causing infections in the intestinal tract of warm-blooded animals and man. In 1980, the World Health Organization warned that the bacteria may be a very common cause of food disease.

Knabel said about 81 million cases of food-borne disease are reported each year. "And a lot of people think it's just the flu, and they don't report it," he said.

Chickens tested positive

About 20 to 100 percent of chickens, according to a market survey, tested positive for Campylobacter. From 3 to 94 percent of the turkeys also tested positive for the bacteria. About 5 to 99 percent of the pork tested positive for it, and 3 to 5 percent of the beef. About 1 percent of eggs tested positive for Campylobacter.

"There's a good chance that you go to the supermarket and you grab some fresh poultry, you're going to have Campylobacter present," said the researcher.

Campylobacter is a Greek word meaning "rod-curved bacteria." The organism is microaerophilic — meaning it loves only a little oxygen (3 to 6 percent). Too much oxygen can kill it.

It also loves carbon dioxide — about 10 percent is sufficient — and thrives in a medium when the temperature is about 108 degrees Fahrenheit. (Chicken body temperature is about 107 degrees Fahrenheit, providing a near-perfect medium for growth.)

Carcass contaminated

Poultry can have the organism in them and show no signs of the disease. But the surface of the carcass becomes contaminated during defeathering and evisceration.

The bacteria has a "corkscrew motility," allowing it to burrow into the mucosa, or the intestine wall. The bacteria can survive cold temperatures, the outside air, and some drying, according to Knabel. But it's sensitive to heat, freezing, salt, and oxygen.

The important thing for producers, packagers, and handlers to know, according to the researcher, is that the bacteria can be destroyed easily by pasteurization. It is more sensitive to heat than Salmonella. Proper cooking and pasteurizing techniques will kill the organism.

Some of the important things to know about the bacteria:

- In the intestinal tract of man, it can multiply from 10 million to 100 million organisms per gram, "which is very high numbers," said Knabel. If poultry have the bacteria, and shed fecal material, there can be high number of Campylobacter present. But the infective dose is low, said Knabel. Only 500 cells can infect a human, causing the illness.

- There are three observable species of Campylobacter — Campylobacter jejuni (90 percent and more of all gastrointestinal illness due to Campylobacter are this species); Campylobacter coli (3 to 5 percent of all gastrointestinal illness due to Campylobacter); and Campylobacter laridis (least common and similar to Campylobacter jejuni).

- If infected, humans experience a range of flu-like symptoms, including watery diarrhea, bloody stools, abdominal pains, and fever. Humans exhibit the symptoms from 2 to 5 days after ingesting the bacteria. The illness lasts up to 10 days. Hospitalization is often required. (But, according to Knabel, the disease is not deadly — only two deaths were reported between 1973 and 1987, he said.)

- The bacteria is spread by undercooking the product containing Campylobacter and through cross contamination (using equipment or hands contaminated by the bacteria). Water sources are easily contaminated.

- The organism can be controlled by using simple cleanliness. "Anything that allows the organism to get from the intestinal tract onto the surface of the carcass is a bad practice," said Knabel. It is important to keep the area clean and maintain a barrier between cooked and uncooked products.

Rid bacteria

To rid the bacteria, poultry products must have a 165 degree F. minimum temperature in the cold spot (typically the thickest part of the breast.)

"Do not use the same equipment to handle both the raw and the cooked products," said Knabel. Many infections occur during the summer at cookouts, when the raw and cooked product are handled with the same utensil.

"The biggest thing with this organism is education," he said. "Educate people on how to prevent cross-contamination and how to cook poultry properly so this isn't a problem. Most problems are going to occur either in the house or in food service operations."

Steve Knabel, assistant professor of food science at Penn State, spoke about the nature and control of Campylobacter.

The Superhuman Farmer

KRISTIN METZKER
Pennsylvania Dairy Princess

MARTINSBURG (Blair Co.) — HELP WANTED: an independent business is in need of a person skilled in mechanics, plumbing, electrical work, agronomy, dairy science, veterinary medicine, artificial insemination, maternity and mid-wife work, calf raising, feed rations, sanitation, business management and accounting. Must be willing to work unlimited hours without holiday vacations or part-time pay on holidays or weekends. Must be reliable, patient, and resourceful. Pay varies due to uncontrollable factors such as weather.

You say you don't think such a person exists? Well, look again, because these qualities describe a dairy farmer. It has come to my attention that for the most part people neither understand or appreciate the type of work that goes into running a farm. An agriculture endeavor such as a dairy farm is a business, thus the operators of that farm: the farmer, a herdsman and any other hired help as well as the farmer's family, are all businessmen. But that isn't all, the farmer and his family must be skilled in all the requirements listed above, because each of them plays an active role in running the business. Just think of all the activities you performed today, it probably makes you tired just to think of them all. Often farmers themselves have to be reminded of how special their works truly are.

With all that is required of the dairymen today, it is no wonder that it takes a special kind of person with a unique personality. All the good management and hard work of the farmer can be destroyed by too much or not enough rain. The best cow in the barn can become ill and die from a mysterious disease that has nothing to do with the way she is treated at the farm. But, for the most part, the farmer never loses his spirit. He keeps getting up at four in the morning and working until seven in the evening. No, farmers aren't crazy, just special.

Agricuturalists are stewards of the land, perhaps today's best environmentalist. A farmer cares what happens to the land, because without its being in top condition it is useless to him. This analogy is a realistic way to explain to those outside of agriculture why a farmer would never harm his animals. "Imagine something that you own that is worth $1,500. That is approximately what one cow is worth. Now imagine you have one hundred of these, totaling $150,000. Now would you ever do anything to harm or destroy that possession? Of course not, and neither would the farmer do anything to harm or destroy his cows."

That story really made me think. It's true farmers have a lot financially invested in their animals, equipment and land. But I'm sure most farmers would agree that although investments and assets are high, income is not. Farmers are involved in agriculture because of a love. A love of the land, love of animals and a love of a way of life that created and shaped our country.

It is no wonder so many farmers hold God so dear in their lives. The life of the farmer and his family is considered by most to be a simpler, holier way of life. The country setting is serene and peaceful. There are no car horns, no sirens, only the calming call of a cricket, the quiet moo of a cow and perhaps the grumbling engine of a tractor during the planting and harvesting seasons. The air is cleaner, the skyline more sky-like, the trees and woodlands still exist. Country and farm settings are great places to raise families, where kids can run and play freely and parents do not need to worry so much about drugs and gangs. Perhaps the location of a dairyman's occupation is one of the few benefits of his labors, because the country life is truly unmatched.

As Pennsylvania Dairy Princess I have seen a disappearance in the understanding of agriculture. I have heard the label "dumb farmer" for too long. I have watched my father do things that I am certain none of the non-agricultural adults I know could have dealt with. My job is to create an understanding and appreciation for the goodness of milk and dairy products. But the people that work to produce this product need to be understood, too.

Farmers, take pride in your work. Look at all the things you do each day and ask yourself if it isn't almost superhuman? Businessman, scientist, mechanic and family man, a farmer is all that and more. Our great dairy products are great today due to labors of farmers down through the years. I tell farmers to be proud of the milk you work to produce, because if you can't take pride in it, how can you expect today's picky consumers to appreciate its goodness? Maybe I should also remind you of this: Be proud of yourself, you've earned it!!!

Develops Pension Plan

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Recognizing that farmers and their farm employees need the opportunity to participate in a pension plan, Dairylea Cooperative Inc. has developed a member pension plan that will become available during the first quarter of this year.

"Farmers, like everyone else, do retire. They need to take an active role in planning for their future on a financial level," said Rick Smith, chief executive officer of Dairylea Cooperative. "Our new pension plan offers a convenient way for our members to provide retirement income for themselves and their farm employees."

According to Smith, the pension plan allows participants to put away up to 15 percent of their annual earned income, to a maximum of $30,000, on a pre-tax basis. Contributions to the pension plan can be made through deductions from members' milk checks. The pension funds are managed by a financial institution, but if participants want to, they can determine their individual investment strategies.

The pension plan is part of Dairylea's Farmer Flex, an innovative flexible benefits program that allows farmer members and their employees to select benefits from a menu of options, and pay for those benefits on a pre-tax basis. Health, dental and life insurance costs, in addition to expenses for dependent child care, can be paid for without the penalties and costs of income taxes.

"We are pleased to add a pension plan to our Farmer Flex program," said Smith. "The basic reasons we developed Farmer Flex was to save our members money, and at the same time, help them provide a competitive benefits package in order to attract and retain good farm employees."

Bedford County Names Outstanding Holstein Youth

By Linda Williams

LOYSBURG (Bedford Co.) — Mark Baker, New Enterprise, and Angelique McDonald, Imler, were named the outstanding Holstein youth at the annual banquet held recently at the Northern Bedford County School.

Mark, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Dale Baker, was named the outstanding boy in the junior division. Mark owns two registered Holsteins.

His family owns a 140-acre farm in New Enterprise and they milk 55 head of Holsteins.

This past year, Mark took two first places at the Bedford Fair and also had the grand champion Holstein.

He also took seconds at the Morrison's Cove and District Dairy Shows; had a fourth at the Black and White Show; and a 7th at the Pennsylvania State Farm Show.

A sixth grader at Northern Bedford Elementary, Mark is active in baseball, football, chorus, the art club and the Church of the Brethren. He is a member of the Southern Cove 4-H Club.

Taking first place in the senior division as the outstanding Holstein girl was Angelique McDonald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Galen McDonald of Imler.

A former Bedford County Dairy Princess, and State and National Guernsey Princess, Angelique owns 22 registered Guernseys and three Holsteins.

In addition to farming, she is a DHIA supervisor.

Angelique is a Southern Cove 4-H leader, on the 4-H Advisory Board, and the Morrison's Cove Dairy Show Board.

She has participated in seven county fairs, two state shows and two national shows.

Her past includes showing many grand champions as well as earning fitting and showmanship awards.

She has participated in the Holstein Quiz Bowl and has won awards for public speaking and extemporaneous speaking.

Mark Baker, squats down with a friend. Baker was named outstanding Bedford County Holstein Youth in the junior division.

Angelique McDonald holds the notebook which contains her record in the world of dairy farming. McDonald was named outstanding Bedford County Holstein Youth in the senior division.

State Grange Supports Dairy Issues

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — With milk prices continuing to drop, dairy farmers are becoming anxious about what they see as an unfair pricing system. The Pennsylvania State Grange continues to fight for these farmers and work with them to promote their cause.

In the past year, both the state and the national Grange have listened to the concerns of dairy farmers, testified at hearings, and promoted the establishment of a base price for manufactured milk to cover the average cost of milk production and a two-tier price plan, according to Brenda Shambaugh, legislative director for the Pennsylvania State Grange.

"We are a grass-roots organization which gets all its legislative policies, including those related to dairy issues, from our members," Shambaugh said.

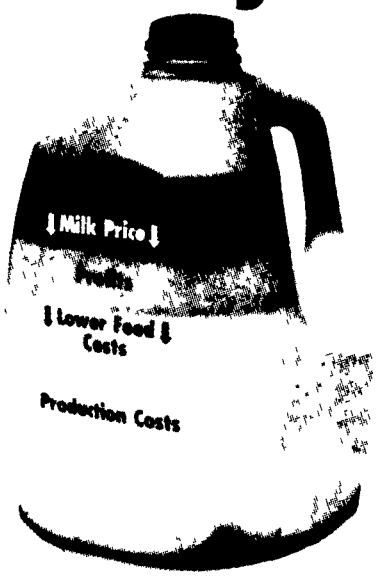
Robert Pardoe, State Grange dairy chairman and dairy farmer, testified before the USDA and the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board (PMMB) on a number of issues. The State Grange recommended the continuation of the $1.05 per cwt over the market price of Class I milk in Pennsylvania. The PMMB has approved continuation. PMMB heard testimony from the State Grange concefning rising fuel costs and a sharp decline of M-W price. The State Grange also testified before the USDA about maintaining the status quo in the federal milk order system.

"Milk prices are continuing to fall," Pardoe said, "and we are aware of the concern of dairy farmers. We must realize that while prices are currently lower than normal ($11.11), this drop came after an extremely high price ($15)."

On a national level, the Grange has recently sent proposals for a national supply management program to the USDA, according to Leroy Watson, legislative representative. This program recognizes regional differences based upon the amount of production, availability to markets, or percentage of regional dairy production.

On a related issue, the State Grange supports the establishment of a program to control and eradicate bovine leukemia virus (BLV). Other countries, including Holland, Germany, Denmark, and Austria have eradicated the disease and the European Economic Community has established a goal to eliminate the virus. Once achieved, this could restrict incoming U.S. exports not free of the virus.

Don't let lower prices skim your income.



Lower your feed costs with Farmline Enzymatics.

Applied at harvest, the exclusive blend of Farmline bacteria and enzymatics improves haylage preservation and "predigests" forage fiber into sugars. With less fiber and more energy in your haylage, you can

- feed more home-grown forage
- reduce purchased protein and energy costs
- increase milk production

In fact, results from universities and producers have shown that a $1.00 investment in Alfazyme or Grasszyme enzymatics can increase net income by $4.00 to $8.00.

OUR NUTRI CARB FERTILIZER COMPANY IS PAYING $12.00 Per Bu. FOR NON-TOXIC WHITE SOYBEANS and guarantees it for this year's crop.

WHY? IT IS VERY SIMPLE

No. 1 The Demand is bigger than the supply. No. 2 People are going vegetarian for health and economy. No. 3 They make better quality soy foods and milk with longer shelf life and have more nutrition.

Our Nutri Carb is a magnet in getting rid of toxins. Does it in beans in first season nearly every time.

LIKEWISE, NUTRI CARB PRODUCES BETTER LIVESTOCK FEED. YELLOW BEANS SELL FOR $8.00 PER BU. IF GROWN ON NUTRI CARB.

A customer has 46% protein beans cleaned for seed at $18 for 60 lb. (bu.) They should transmit a high protein crop, same as livestock reproduce their qualities. We sell them for him. Order early. Supply is limited.

If your cows don't make money, grow your feed the right way and save insecticide and vet bills. Or sell some cows and raise high priced soybeans. If you would not know what to do with the extra $6 per bu. x 800 bu. = $4,800, give it to Christian Aid Ministries to relieve suffering. An obligation!

Speaker Says Stray Voltage Reduces Milk Check

WHITE HORSE (Lancaster Co.)—"Stray voltage is funny," said Consultant Bill Roberts from Utica, NY. "You can't see it, smell it or feel it yourself, but the dairy cow can feel it."

Speaking at Lapp's Barn Equipment open house Thursday, Roberts said that you can do everything possible with balanced rations, but if the cow is not comfortable because of a stray voltage problem, the cow is limited in what she can do for you.

Signs that you may have the problem in your barn could be nervous cows, cows switching their tails for no reason, or lapping water instead of normal drinking.

Ninety percent of the farms that Roberts checks with his special computer equipment have a voltage problem. The computer is hooked up to five points on the farmstead and each motor is turned on one at a time and the computer can sense what is happening at each point. If voltage is present for only one-thousandth of a second, the computer records it. One tenth of a volt will affect some cows. It puts animals under stress, elevates SCC counts and restricts milk production potential.

If the voltage problem is on the pipeline, the cow doesn't feel it until the milk starts to flow. The rubber liners protect, but the milk flow acts as a conductor. Roberts said SCC counts can be reduced by fifty percent in 30 days if the problem of stray voltage is solved.

Roberts said most of the problems come from 110 equipment and not the 220 equipment. Imbalanced loads on the service panel, improper AMPS on both sides of the service panel, or improper grounds can cause problems. Electrical boxes are to be kept clean and dry and often they are not in the best places in a barn for this to happen.

"With the low milk prices, all the premiums available must be taken," Roberts said. "When you correct a stray voltage problem and get better quality milk, you make your cows more comfortable and increase your milk check as well."

Berks County Dairy Farm Expands

One of the top cows in the herd, according to her name card, appears to have no problem with the rubber-matted tie stall, nor the chainlink snap tie.

STOUCHBURG (Berks Co.) — An open house of a 65-cow capacity dairy facility in southwestern Berks County last week attracted about 600 people to inspect the offerings of the companies and businesses involved in the design and construction.

Mervin Brubaker, owner, declined to talk about the new facility. The farm is being operated by son Glenn and his wife Janet Brubaker.t

The large crowd examined the new tie-stall barn with a wide center alley and grated, gravity-flow gutters; the wide feed alleys; the ventilation system; 2½ -inch pipeline, cooling equipment and milk house; a 103-foot by 103-foot by 8-foot earth bank manure lagoon with a concrete bottom capable of holding 6 months of manure; and three large silos.

In addition, there were trailers, tankers, bunkers, bunks, precast manure panels, bale choppers, shredder and crimpers, mixers and other commercial displays.

Companies from Myerstown, Richland, Hamburg, Reading and Lebanon areas helped sponsor the open house. Those companies included Star Silo, Elco Concrete Products, Rufus Brubaker Refrigeration Sales, Rigidply Rafters, Cedar Crest Equipment, Shartlesville Farm Service, Clover Farms Dairy Products, F.M. Brown's Sons Inc., and Lebanon Valley National Bank.

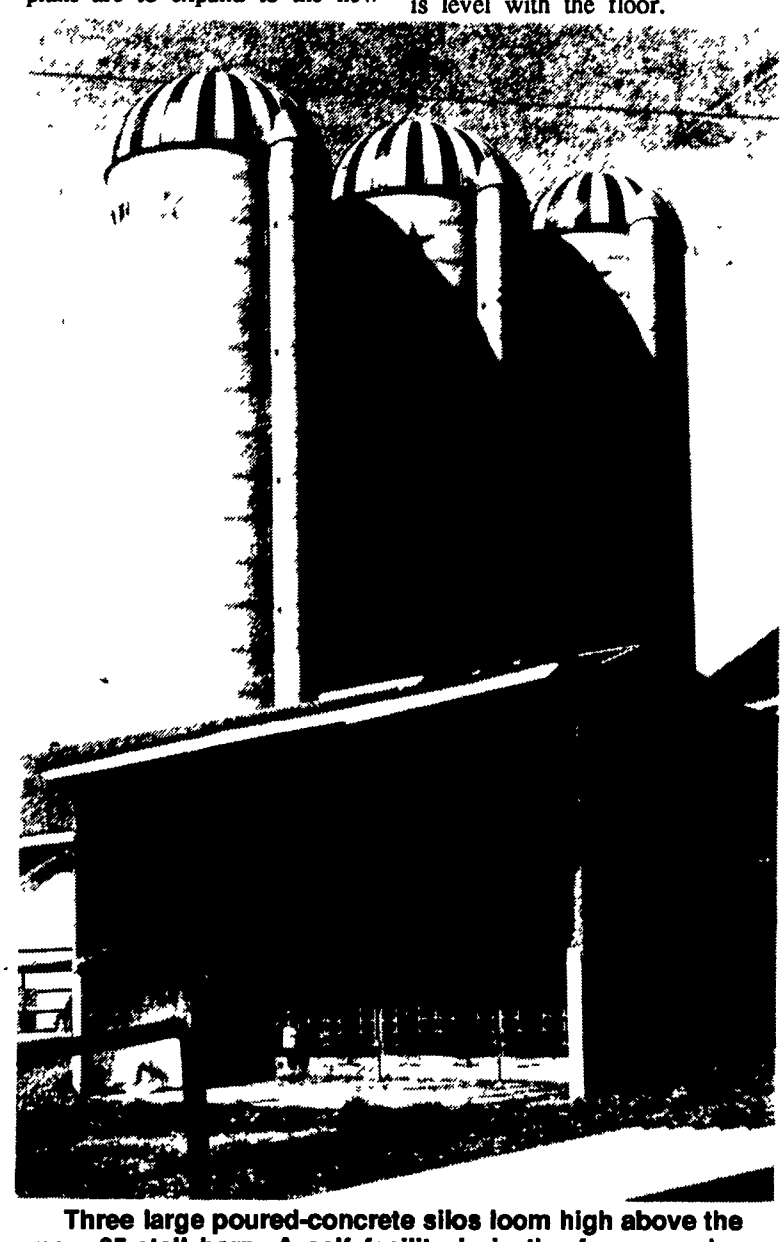
The operation's two 20-foot by 80 foot silos and one 16 by 80 foot silo lead to a feed room with an opening to the barn, near the milkhouse and office.

The two larger silos are used for corn silage and haylage. The smaller silo is used for high moisture ear corn.

According to information supplied on fliers, the farm consists of 84 acres in rye, alfalfa, or corn. Currently 60 cows are milked, but plans are to expand to the new barn's capacity. The herd has been running an average of 60 pounds of milk per cow per day at 4 percent fat and 3.4 percent protein. The somatic cell count was most recently 81,000.

The Brubakers feed one group twice-a-day with Total Mixed Ration and top feed three times a day. All cows get 23 pounds of corn silage, 34.5 pounds of haylage, 20.5 pounds of high moisture ground ear corn and 6.1 pounds of concentrate.

The stalls are concrete with a rubber matting and a chainlink snap-fastner tie. The feeding area is level with the floor.



Three large poured-concrete silos loom high above the new 65-stall barn. A calf facility is in the foreground.

Several of the estimate 600 or more people who toured the Brubaker farm walk through the new 65-tie stall barn noting the wide center alley, the grated manure gutter, and the rubber-matted stalls. The 2½ -inch pipeline can also be seen.

Bedford Extension Holds Annual Meeting

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

BEDFORD, (Bedford Co.) — James Weiler, multicounty farm management agent, and Don Evans, assistant dean of the College of Agriculture at Penn State University were the key speakers at the annual Bedford County Extension Banquet.

"It is the volunteers who are the key to the success of Extension," said Evans. He also commended government on helping with the success of Extension throughout the state noting that county commissioners Dick Rice, Kim Koon, and Gary Ebersole along with Dick Hess, state representative; and Bud Shuster, congressman; have all cooperated to make it a success.

"A democracy is no better than its people and the education they receive," Evans continued. He also complimented the Extension on doing a good job at helping everyone learn more about the world. "We are no longer a county, or a state or a nation that stands alone."

"Extension will continue to provide support for continuing education," Evans concluded.

Jim Weiler thanked the Extension for the part it played in his trip to Poland this past summer. Weiler took the trip with other agents from Pennsylvania.

The purpose was to exchange agriculture ideas with the country of Poland. As a part of his talk, Weiler showed a slide presentation which outlined the highlights of the exchange. He showed pictures of farmers in Poland raising cauliflower, sugar beets, forage beets, potatoes, pork, and a few dairy farms.

For the most part, he found farming methods in Poland to be far behind those of the United States. "But," he said, "farming isn't the only place where this country is lagging. It takes 15 years to get a telephone in Poland and at least five to get a car."

He said the trip was something he had wanted to do ever since he was a teenager.

Other highlights of the evening included remarks from Bedford County Dairy Princess Nicole Childers who prepared cheese appetizers for the dinner.

Fred Claycomb and Dottie Bromley reported on the Regional and State Extension Council. Thelma Albright gave a positive report on Legislative Day which she and Tom Wakefield attended.

Special awards were presented by County Agent Susan Fox to Fred Claycomb and Loren Woy, both past board presidents and to Tom Eller, Sam Rose and Matthew Boyer.

Pam Hershberger presented a slide show on highlights of the Extension for the past year which included everything from recycling to latch key children. She noted that agriculture contributes $54,000,000 to the economy of Bedford County each year.

Officers elected for the coming year include: Dottie Bromley, president; Paul Turner, vice president; Pam Hershberger, secretary; and Peggy McCammon, treasurer.

The banquet was held at the Bedford Church of the Brethren. Connie Claycomb gave the invocation.

Dairy Council Inc. Changes Direction

and nutritionists who oversee and initiate programs designed to meet their goals.

According to executive director Jan B. Stanton, some changes to past practices are coming.

"We've had a history that has been exciting land successful," Stanton told the group of about 200. "But it is sometimes dangerous for an organization to have successful past.

"It can tie us to old methods of operating. We must continually seek to improve. This means we must question how we operate and make the necessary changes."

According to Stanton there are some changes in the offing.

Business as usual at out Dairy Council is out. We have gone through a strategic planning process that will map our course for the future," Stanton said.

In September, the council held a 2-day skull session to develop strategic planning. A new mission statement was developed.

"Dairy council ensures that dairy foods are positioned as providing a unique contribution to personal health and well-being within the framework of the major food catagories," Stanton said. "We challenge our employees to market creative and scientifically based nutrition education materials and service directly to key leaders, as well as to consumers through various media, in order to meet the needs of changing lifestyles."

She said it is a mission which must be the focus of all of the organization's activities.

According to Stanton, as a result of the reviewing of the effectiveness and efficiency of Dairy Council Inc., it was decided to limit the scope of aggresive efforts to three major groups — health professionals, educators and the media.

Therefore DC Inc. will have three major teams operating by August, each of which will report to the executive director.

The three groups are the health professional programs team, the nutrition education programs team and the public relations team.

Part of the reason for the change, according to Stanton, is that, "We had become product driven. By this we mean, when a new product came out from NDC, we would gear up to promote that product. Sometimes without thinking about whether it really suited our customers.

"Today, at Dairy Council we have dedicated ourselves to talking to the customer and finding out what she wants before developing or promoting new products."

Furthermore, Stanton reported that it was discovered that methods for evaluating success were not exactly encompassing.

"Our standards of quality were not often measured. We have now established standards for customer service. For example, we are now tracking orders that come into our office and measuring how long it takes for them to be processed and mailed out," Stanton said.

Another problem with status quo at Dairy Council Inc., according to Stanton was the variety of responsibilities which fell upon field workers to perform and the spectrum of knowledge with which they had to work.

Thus the formation of teams and the narrowing of focused goal groups.

Left, Mary Anne Cleary, project director for Nutrition Issues for the Black Community, presents outstanding achievement awards to Lindy Kilby Brooks, executive director for North Inc. Philadelphia WIC program, and Janet Ohene-Frempong, nutrition education coordinator for the program. The program is representative of the kind of group targeted approach DC Inc. is doing to instill better dietary practices in Americans.

RCBA Asks New York State To Establish Milk Price Survival Floor

BATAVIA, N.Y. — The cooperative that represents the majority of New York State dairy farmers today (Wednesday) petitioned the state to establish an emergency milk market order setting temporary survival floor prices paid by purchasers of milk produced by the state's dairy farmers.

In a petition filed in Albany with New York State Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets, Richard T. McGuire, the Regional Cooperative Bargaining Agency Inc. (RCBA) requested the commissioner to use his authority under the Rogers-Allen Act of 1937 to avert disaster in the state's rural economy caused by a sudden and unprecedentedly sharp fall in milk prices over the past year that is expected to continue through 1991. At the same time, the cost of production incurred by New York State dairy farms has climbed steadily and is projected to rise through 1991.

According to RCBA, current milk prices already have fallen below the cost of production for many New York State dairy farmers, and hundreds of dairy farms are at risk of failure in the coming months. The petition requests a state-regulated safety net for prices.

Specifically, the price paid to dairy farmers for Class I or fluid milk would not be allowed to fall below $14.50 for one hundred pounds of milk and the minimum price to be paid for Class II milk, used for manufacturing cottage cheese, yogurt and other dairy products, would be $11.50 per hundred pounds. Dairy farmers would actually receive a uniform, or blend price for all their milk of about $12 per hundred pounds.

The minimum prices which the state's dairy farmers now receive for their milk are established by government market administrators under a joint federal and state marketing system. Prices here are based on market prices for manufactured milk in Minnesota and Wisconsin and are not based either on market conditions in New York State or on New York dairy farmers' cost of production. The RCBA petition asks the Commissioner to establish a single set of survival prices for the entire state.

The RCBA issued the following statement:

"On behalf of all the dairy farmers in New York State, we are asking the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets to establish a survival floor for prices paid by purchasers of milk produced by New York State dairy farmers to head off a disaster now looming for the rural economy of the state.

"Due mainly to market conditions caused by the buildup in the Midwest of huge inventories of manufactured dairy products by large food processing companies, the price of milk in New York State has plummeted more suddenly and precipitously in the past year than at any other time in the last 25 years. During the past year as a whole (December 1989 to December 1990), the price of milk paid to New York State dairy farmers under the federal milk marketing system fell by more than 27 percent, and the price is expected to continue to decline substantially in 1991.

"For many dairy farmers, the cost of production already far exceeds the price they received for their milk. Even lower prices over a long period will result in the failure of large numbers of the state's dairy farmers and will impose severe hardships on many more. This will have a devastating effect on rural communities whose economies are heavily dependent on dairy farming and ultimately may result in shortages and higher prices for consumers.

"The adoption by the Commissioner of a survival price will help continue to guarantee an adequate supply of reasonably priced milk for the millions of consumers of New York State.

"The Commissioner has ample, tested authority under the state's Rogers-Allen Act to establish a survival price for milk producers in order to insure an adequate supply of this essential and highly perishable commodity. The New York State Legislature by statute originally enacted in the 1930s gave the State Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets the authority and the mandate to establish survival prices for the milk of New York dairy farmers. Milk orders have been in effect in Western New York continuously since 1938.

"There is no economic reason why the adoption of the survival prices requested will have any adverse impact on consumer prices. There has been no decrease in the retail price of milk paid by New York consumers over the past year despite the sharp decline in prices paid to dairy farmers. In fact, the retail price of milk has risen in some areas; the proportion of the retail price paid to farmers has declined sharply; and the proportion going to retailers in the distribution chain has risen substantially.

"Given this structure of the retail price of milk, a minor change at the farm level should have no measurable effect at the check-out counter. Moreover, the failure to adopt a survival price will result in widespread farm failures followed by a decline in supply and a significant shortage that will cause prices to consumers to rise.

"Our request for desperately needed emergency action is in keeping with the long-established public policy of the state to insure order in an agricultural sector deemed essential to the state's economy and to the public welfare. The proposed survival price will be lower than the actual cost of production of many farmers. It will be in effect only for 12 months and will sunset automatically unless the Commissioner makes another finding of an urgent need to continue or modify it."

RCBA is a specialized bargaining entity set up for the purpose of petitioning the Commissioner under the Rogers-Allen Act. Its membership consists of the Regional Cooperative Marketing Agency, Inc. (RCMA), a cooperative corporation whose membership, in turn, embraces approximately 22,000 dairy farmers in the northeast.

Following today's filing, the Commissioner must give notice of public hearing. Following the public hearing, if the Commissioner makes a favorable recommendation on the petition, a period of public comment then must follow before the Commissioner can rule. The decision-making process could last several months.

N.Y. Ag Agencies, Officials Support RCMA Efforts

ALBANY, N.Y.— The Regional Cooperative Marketing Agency's (RCMA) efforts to raise prices for dairy farmers have gained endorsements from several important sources.

New York's Joint Commission on Dairy Industry Development, several New York State legislators, the New York Farm Bureau Dairy Committee and the Grange have expressed support for RCMA's efforts to provide an economic safety net for the state's milk producers, RCMA Executive Director Carmen L. Ross reported to the Board of Directors during a meeting March 8 in Albany.

Support focuses on a petition to Richard T. McGuire, state commissioner of agriculture and markets, which requests that he establish a statewide marketing order to set minimum prices on milk by using his authority granted under the Rogers-Allen Act. The petition was filed last month by the Regional Cooperative Bargaining Agency (RCBA), an organization in which RCMA is a member.

The commissioner has begun the legal steps necessary for acting upon RCBA's petition, Mr. Ross reported. On March 5, he sent out notice of the petition. Interested parties have until March 22 to submit additional proposals to the commissioner. After that date he is expected to announce the hearing.

RCMA is working with many persons and organizations to arrange expert testimony for the hearing on the plight of the state's dairy industry. The hearing is a crucial step in the process, because the commissioner's decision on minimum milk prices must be based on information presented at the hearing.

The RCMA Board of Directors was also informed that directors of Upstate Milk Cooperatives Inc., an RCMA member which had expressed opposition to the Rogers-Allen petition in Western New York, had voted at a special meeting to endorse the RCBA's Rogers-Allen petition in concept. Upstate and Niagara Milk Cooperative Inc. are expected to submit to the commissioner of agriculture a petition for the Western New York Milk Marketing Order. This petition should complement the RCBA petition.

RCMA is encouraging its members to write to elected officials to urge them to notify the commissioner that they support RCBA's petition and to urge the commissioner to act as rapidly as possible. "Dairy farmers need help in the form of higher prices, and they need them now," Ross said.

RCMA directors also voted to endorse the concept of federal legislation that would freeze Class

Farmers Union Urges New Secretary To Help Producers

PHILADELPHIA — The new secretary of agriculture should utilize the discretionary authorities given to him under the 1990 farm law to improve conditions in rural America, according to the National Farmers Union convention.

In a special order of business recently, the farm organization's delegates called upon the new agriculture secretary to raise the farm law's minimum target prices to levels that better approximate the actual average costs of production and also link target prices to changes in the consumer price index.

The convention urged the new secretary to raise the commodity loan rates on wheat and feed grains closer to target price levels and also to increase marketing loan rates on cotton, rice, and oilseeds in efforts to improve farm income and lower government costs.

The Farmers Union is requesting the new secretary to implement the Targeted Option Payments (TOP) Program and implement the bushel-based pilot program for wheat and feed grains. In addition, the farm convention called for increasing minimal levels of wheat and corn in the nation's farmer-owned reserve, and recommended changes in the deficiency payment system.

The convention delegates said they recongized that whether the farm law was reopened, amended or ignored, additional changes to the structure and operation of the 1990 farm law were "virtually inevitable."

The Farmers Union noted the Bush administration has already proposed budget changes for 1992 that would significantly impact the farm law by imposing additional budget cuts. Congress has also opened the farm law debate by considering additional authorization for the Export Enhancement Program, the farm convention pointed out.

In making changes to the 1990 farm law, the Farmers Union convention urged Congress to "place the highest priority on providing family farmers with the opportunity to earn a fair return for their commodities from the marketplace."

In addition, the farm group is asking Congress to repeal the deficit reduction taxes imposed on commodities as loan origination fees, and to provide improved assistance through food and nutrition programs.

Petitions containing nearly 40,000 signatures from throughout the nation have been collected in a month's period of time by the farm organization's members. The petitions were delivered recently to Senate and House agriculture committees and the White House.

Landmark Genetics Acquires Bulls

HUGHSON, Calif. — Two bulls were recently added to the stable of Landmark Genetics young sire proving program, one a Holstein from Pennsylvania, the other a Jersey from Virginia.

WA-Del ISAAC-et, a young Holstein bull bred by Rick Wadel, of Shippensburg, was selected for sampling and his semen has just been released for use in herds on officials Dairy Herd Improvement test throughout the United States.

The goal is to achieve a minimum of 50 daughters milking in 40 herds across the nation for a high repeatability on his first test.

According to Terry Rawn, regional sire analyst for Landmark said the company selected ISAAC because of his bloodline. He is sired by Trifecta, one of Bell's best sons for protein and TPI.

His dam is a Very Good 88 with an Excellent mammary and has produced 25,864 pounds of milk, 4.7 percent of which was fat and 3.4 percent of which was protein, during a lactation started at 3 years, 8 months. Her dam, VG Lime Hollow Mars, had a lifetime 4 percent fat and 3.2 percent protein. The next dam is also a VG.

Semen from ISAAC is to be available for sampling in the "GO" Herd Program for the next 60 to 90 days.

Another bull bred by Waverly Farm, of Clearbrook, Va., is WF Sooner Count-et, a young Jersey bull.

Count is also entering the "GO" program and his semen will be available for the next 60 to 90 days.

Count is sired by Sooner, the sire noted for high production and high rear udders

His dam is Quicksilver Royal, a VG 89 as a 2-year-old. Her full sister was VG 85 percent and made 600 pounds of fat and was the dam of a 1989 National heifer consignment. Their dam is Favorite Saint, an Excellent 94 percent, with three records over 19,000 pounds of milk. Her maternal sister is Bold T, a VG 85 percent with records of 17,000 pounds of milk, 764 pounds fat and 619 pounds protein. Their dam was a daughter of Chocolate Soldier.

I prices at last October's level, which was $15.64 in Federal Order 2, until September 1992.

The legislation was introduced by Congressman Robin Tallon of South Carolina and Sen. Patrick Leahy of Vermont. Economists estimated this would add approximately $1.20 to the blend price in the New York-New Jersey marketing area and $1.50 to the blend price in New England.

In addition, Sen. Leahy's bill proposes to raise federal solids non-fat standards to match standards in California. This would increase solids non-fat standards in milk products, which would have a two-fold benefit to the dairy industry: It would create a market for powdered milk, because powdered milk would be used to increase solids in milk products, and consumers would receive better testing products. The proposal would also go a long way toward solving the problems caused by a surplus of milk, because the increased use of powdered milk nationwide would help reduce surpluses.

RCMA's directors are very concerned about finding a long-term solution to dairy prices. At the previous month's meeting, the board voted to support the concept of supply management, and urged the Department of Agriculture to study supply management and a two-tier pricing system. RCMA has not endorsed any of the specific supply management programs currently under discussion.

Membership in RCMA continues to grow. Directors voted to accept the membership applications of 19 individual members and one cooperative, Scenic Mountain Milk Cooperative based in Forksville. The cooperative has 14 members.

For IPM compatible control.

Codling moth isn't your only problem. Other pests—like aphids, leafrollers, and scale crawlers—can also spoil the appearance and quality of your apples.

Philadelphia Flower Show Heralds Endless Spring

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

PHILADELPHIA (Philadelphia Co.) — Thousands jam the Civic Center to admire and savor the aroma of spring flowers and greenery from around the world. The annual Philadelphia Flower Show has attracted crowds since 1829, and this year, March 10 through 17, is no exception.

The largest indoor flower show in the world features a six-acre indoor floor plan that reveals the most stunning designs by more than 100 exhibitors.

Full-scale exhibits show how to use greenery and flowers to enhance flagstone walks, gazebos, woodland settings, and city sidewalks. Winding canals lined with thousands of Holland tulips, tropical foliage and roses in every hue of the rainbow are planted among tall trees. Waterfalls surrounded by exotic flora from Africa and other continents show nature's beauty at her best.

More than 1,500 people showcased their talents in competitive classes ranging from balcony treatments and window boxes to table settings and miniature flower arrangmements.

But the show doesn't focus strictly on beauty. Delaware Valley College, Soil Conservation Service, and other agencies show visitors how to help the environment by choosing plants that repel pests, designing with plants that use less water, fertilizers, and pesticides.

These exhibitors and other ecological landscape designers are committed to integrating the natural landscape with buildings. The designers are trained to work with natural processes of a site rather than against it.

Lectures and demonstrations are offered each day. Participants can learn Ikebano, Italian, Dutch and other types of flower arranging. Classes in flower photography, herbal vinegars, water gardening and similar topics are available.

Last year more than 225,000 attended the eight-day show. The show opens at 10 a.m. until 9:30 p.m. except Sunday, March 17, when it closes at 6 p.m.

Tickets are $10.50 for adults and $5.25 for children under 12. Proceeds from the show help fund the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, which organizes community groups to green up their neighborhoods with trees, parks, gardens and windowboxes.

More than 200 judges come at their own expense from as far away as England, Bermuda, and California to award more than 1,200 ribbons and plaques to competitive displays such as this one.

Some of the world's finest horticultural talents from nations around the world combined their designing talents with nature's beauty.

The fresh scent of spring-flowering bulbs permeated the Civic Center, annual site of the Philadelphia Flower Show.

The serene beauty of flowers surrounds this gazebo and flagstone patio.

Paint your landscape with color by using wildflowers that multiply and come up every year.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

There was a time, in earlier days, when I enjoyed it more.

Its rushing sound through the big maples around the house made the inside feel comfortably secure and cozy on blustery winter nights. It toss-dried clean, wet laundry out on the lines with more efficiency than the electric dryer, leaving an irreplaceable fresh outdoorsy scent on every load. And its cooling effect offered refreshing relief on hot, sticky days of mid-summer.

And while those are all still enjoyable to the senses, my appreciation of wind seems to be diminishing in some sort of ratio with the advancing years.

This is starting to sound like -- gulp! -- some old codger complaining.

Maybe I've just replaced too many pieces of plastic blown off barn windows... picked up too many downed limbs... fished too many feed bags, plastic buckets and various other unsightly wind-blown objects from in and around the little pond below the house.

The Big Wind (mini-tornado) that whipped through the farm last summer may have been the final blow -- pun intended -- to my mental outlook on air blasts. We are now burning for kindling the last residue of the wind-wrecked giant broken limbs which completely obliterated the yard and left in a skeletonized state our beloved old maple trees.

After staggering around the farm over recent days, half-blinded by bits of straw, hay and sawdust lodging behind my contact lenses, I'm expending effort to remember that continuing wind in March is normal -- if there is such a thing -- and will shortly turn lamb-like. 'Course, if you've ever watched lambs butt heads and their mothers at feeding time, you may question what "gentle as a lamb" really means.

Still, the brisk breezes have so dried the fields that manure hauling and chiseling the nutrients into the ground is far ahead of some years. A million diamonds sparkle across the surface of the wind-whipped waters of the big pond. And our resident redtail hawks soar with magnificence on the wind currents over the greening expanses of the lower meadow.

And if March delivers a constant bluster of wind, blowing in with that are any number of unmistakable indications of the impending first day of spring.

There it was, spotted hopping around a neighbor's lawn, in the early morning sunshine a few days ago. The First Robin. Then another, and another, in other lawns and bare-branch trees of the rural development adjacent to the farm. But the first bluebird we saw had beaten the robin by a full week.

Already a dandelion's cheery yellow face smiles through the clover on the south-sloping hillside of the lawn between our house and barn. Weeping willows below the barn are pushing tender green buds and the towering pussy willow bush (tree?) waves gray-cat-fur blooms above the back yard. From beneath a blanket of leaf litter in a sheltered corner near the greenhouse, the first purple crocus bud pushes up to mark the season.

And, even without these familiar portents of spring, a drama which unfolded last weekend on the sparkling waters of windswept pond confirmed the urges of the season of renewed life and growth.

Last year's pair of Canada geese and their single offspring return daily, nibbling at green shoots of meadow grass and growing fat and sleek on the gleanings of goose food from the ponds.

When a fourth handsome, heavy-necked bird arrived on a recent morning, it set off a day-long squabble, squawk and chase session. Since the two older geese kept themselves between their grown baby and the newcomer, we assumed the young one is a female, and the visitor a potential mate. The territorial posturings went on all day and continued well after dark, but by late in the day the young one and the visitor seemed to be drawing closer.

Now we're back to three, with our youngest figuring Dad goose finally flogged the suitor off, honking something about his daughter being too young.

I'd like to ask the kid how he got to be so familiar with this subject.

But he'd probably suggest I go out in the wind and blow away.

FFA HAPPENINGS

Leadership Conference Held

Heather Becker from the Pequea Valley FFA chapter recently participated in a statewide leadership conference.

The annual State Legislative Leadership Conference (SLLC) was held March 3-5, 1991 in Harrisburg.

More than 100 members and teachers from across the state participated in the activities of the three-day event.

The conference highlight was a legislative breakfast where participants had the opportunity to meet their state legislators.

In addition, visits to the capital building and the state museum were scheduled later the same day.

Other points of interest that were visited included the Pennsylvania Farmers Association, Hershey Chocolate, the Game and Fish Commission, and the Governors Mansion.

The members were also given time to learn to know each other and practice various leadership skills that were taught at a series of workshops. However, there was also time to sit back, relax, and enjoy recreational activities.

SLLC was sponsored by Chevron U.S. Inc., Sun Company, Pennsylvania Farmers' Association, and the FFA Foundation. The conference was conducted by the State Officer Team and various staff members, teachers, and special guests.

MICROWAVE MINUTES

By JOYCE BATTCHER

A homemade hot sandwich is one answer to the question: "What can I cook that really tastes good and is done really fast?"

With your microwave oven, one homemade sandwich is done in less than five minutes from refrigerator to table. Of, if you're cooking for three or four (or if some ingredients need thawing first), preparation time is no more than 15 minutes.

Ingredient-wise, it means having some fish fillets or boneless chicken breasts handy. (When I buy fish fillets or chicken breasts, I wrap them individually in freezer paper or freeze them on a cookie sheet, then quickly transfer them to a freezer-proof container, separating pieces with waxed paper.) Also, keep a package of hamburger rolls or whole wheat bread in your freezer and remove rolls or slices as you need them. Keep a head of lettuce in your refrigerator, along with some salad and cheese (or keep grated natural cheese in your freezer.)

To season fish or chicken sandwiches, you have many choices. Common spices, such as those used in today's recipes, can be sprinkled on as needed. Or you can combine them in a small jar with a sprinkle-on top and have the mixture ready to use as needed. Microwave season coating mixes, such as French's Lemon Dill Fish, Lemon Butter Fish, Italian Parmesan Chicken, Garlic Butter Chicken or Barbecue Chicken work well. Use them according to package directions with a pound of fish or chicken breasts, or pour envelope contents into a jar with a sprinkle-on top and use for individual servings.

The first recipe, Fast Fish Burgers, is very simple: microwaving seasoned fish fillets, popping them in toasted rolls or bread and adding lettuce and salad dressing. These fish sandwiches are fresh-tasting and better for you than fast-food versions. There's no extra calories from breading and no extra fat from deep-fat frying — just good fresh-tasting fish.

Be careful not to overcook the fish by following recipe directions. And, drain off any liquid that forms during cooking to prevent the roll or bread from getting soggy.

Deluxe Barbecued Chicken Burgers are also quick and easy to make. Again, be careful not to overcook by following directions. Here, as with the fish, arranging, covering and standing time help give perfect results.

During final heating, be sure to follow recipe directions to keep rolls from getty soggy. And do not microwave too long. If cheese melts completely or rolls feel hot, cheese will taste rubbery and the rolls tough.

Fast Fish Burgers

1 pound lean boneless fish fillets, such as torsk (cod), haddock, halibut, pollack, ocean perch, etc.
1 teaspoon no-salt lemon herb seasoning
¼ teaspoon dill weed
¼ teaspoon paprika
Dash ground pepper (optional)
4 whole wheat hamburger rolls or bread slices, toasted
Lettuce leaves
Low-calorie salad dressing, mayonnaise, or tarter sauce.

If frozen, thaw fish and pat dry with paper towels. Place fish in a shallow microwavable casserole or 9-inch baking dish. Combine no-salt lemon herb seasoning, dill weed and paprika (and pepper if desired), or substitute a store-bought microwave fish seasonsed coating mix. Sprinkle about half of mixture on fish; turn fish over and sprinkle with remaining mixture. Arrange fish with thickest, meatiest parts to outside edges of dish. Tuck thin tail-parts underneath. Cover with waxed paper. Microwave (High) 3 to 5 minutes, rotating dish once, or until fish starts to look opaque (solid white). Check after 3 minutes; rearrange fish if necessary for even cooking. Let stand, covered, about 2 minutes. Fish is done when it is completely opaqued and, when tested with fork, flakes easily. Drain fish and place on toasted rolls or bread. Top with lettuce, salad dressing and roll top. Makes 4 servings.

TO THAW FISH: Microwave on Medium Low (30 percent power, and 200 watts) 1½ minutes. Rotate and turn over; separate fish as soon as possible. Microwave on Medium Low 1½ minutes more. Remove thawed pieces when they are pliable, but still feel icy cold. Let stand 5 minutes before cooking.

FOR ONE: Combine spices. (If desired, place a jar with a sprinkle-on top). Place a 3 to 4-ounce fillet in a small microwavable baking dish or saucer. Sprinkle with desired amount of spice mixture. (Store remaining mixture, tightly covered in a dark, dry, cool place.) Cover fish with waxed paper. Microwave (High) 1 to 1½ minutes, checking after 1 minute, or until almost solid white. Continue as above.

Each sandwich: 315 calories, 29g protein, 10g fat, 22g carbohydrate, 399mg sodium, 0 cholesterol).

Deluxe Barbecued Chicken Burgers

2 (3 to 4 oz. each) boneless chicken breast halves
Paprika
Onion powder
Garlic powder (optional)
Ground black pepper (optional)
Butter or margarine
2 to 4 whole wheat hamburger rolls, English muffins or Kaiser rolls, toasted
Thick barbecue sauce
2 to 4 slices reduced-fat Cheddar cheese.

Sprinkle both sides of chicken with onion powder and paprika (and, if used, garlic powder and pepper), or substitute a store-bought microwave chicken seasoned coating mix. Shape each into a rounded pattie on a microwavable plate or pie plate. Cover with waxed paper. Microwave (High) 1 minute; turn patties over, rearrange and re-cover. Microwave (High) 1 to 1½ minutes or until center looks done and feels firm. Let stand 3 minutes before testing for final doneness. Test by cutting into thickest part of chicken. If meat and juices are golden, rather than pink, chicken is done.

Lightly buttered rolls and set roll bottoms in a doughnut shape on a microwave bacon rack or paper-towel lined tray. Top with chicken; drizzel each with about 1 tablespoon barbecue sauce. Top with cheese and roll top. Cover with a paper towel. Microwave on Medium (50 percent power, 325-350 watts) 1 to 1½ minutes or until cheese barely starts to melt. Makes 2 large or 4 small sandwiches.

VARIATION: Microwave 2 prepared breaded chicken patties according to package directions. (Allow about 1½ minutes to High per pattie. Cover with waxed paper.) Continue as above.

(Each large sandwich: 290 calories, 31g protein, 8g fat, 22g carbohydrate, 515mg sodium, 82 mg cholesterol.)

"Farming is a big investment...

Time is valuable. An equipment breakdown in the field, delayed supplies, or sudden weather changes mean lost dollars, without quick reaction. Our GE mobile radio system gives us greater control and coordination over our operation. It's a farmer's friend."

Why are farmers turning to mobile radio? During planting and harvesting your farm and equipment need to be operating at full potential. General Electric Mobile Radio Systems provide quick, cost effective communications from home or field. It's like having another "farm hand" to help with the chores.

ALL-AMERICAN QUICHE TARTS

12 slices whole wheat bread
6 eggs, well beaten
1 can (5 to 6.75 oz.) chunk or shredded chicken, undrained skim or low-fat milk
½ cup frozen peas, separated
¼ to ½ teaspoon dill weed
1 slice (1 oz.) pasteurized process American cheese, cut into sixths

Cut crusts from bread and discard or save for another use. With rolling pin, roll bread until very flat. For each tart, place 2 slices of the bread 1 on top of another so that corners alternate to make an 8-pointed figure. Roll again. Fit 2 rolled slices into each of 6 lightly greased 6-ounce custard cups, pressing to fit to sides of cups. Brush with small amount of the beaten eggs. Bake in preheated 350F oven 5 minutes.

Meanwhile, drain chicken and mushrooms into liquid measure. Add milk to make ½ cup liquid. Beat into remaining eggs until well blended. Set aside. In medium bowl, stir together drained chicken and mushrooms, peas and dill weed until well combined. Spoon ¼ cup of the chicken mixture into each toast cup. Pour ¼ cup of the reserved egg mixture over chicken mixture in each cup.

Bake in preheated 350F oven 15 minutes. Top each with 1 piece of the cheese. Continue baking until puffed in centers and knife inserted near centers comes out clean, about an additional 5 to 10 minutes. Let stand 5 minutes before serving.

Most of us could benefit by cutting down on fat- and sugar-laden sweets and choosing more reasonable end-of-the-meal treats. Lemon De-light Pie is a luscious way to start. This no-bake pie is a sublime combination of lemon-fresh chiffon in a tasty bran-flake crust. When garnished with a colorful arrangement of your favorite summer fruits, it's a refreshing delight for your eye, palate and body.

Many desserts contain ingredients with low nutrient density — they supply food energy, but few needed nutrients. Egg-rich Lemon De-Light Pie is a more practical dessert choice since eggs are a complete protein source and contain 13 vitamins and many minerals. The fresh fruit garnish and bran-flake crust are both sources of complex carbohydrates which many authorities recommend we should consume in increased amounts.

There's no need to turn on the oven when preparing Lemon De-Light Pie. And, but a few minutes of heating to dissolve the gelatin is the only range-top step required.

Lemon De-Light Pie
6 Servings

1-½ cups crushed bran flakes (about 6 oz.)
¼ cup butter, softened
½ cup sugar, divided
½ cup lemon juice
¼ cup cold water
1 envelope unflavored gelatin
6 eggs
Fresh fruit of your choice
Mint leaves, optional

In medium bowl, stir together bran flakes, butter and 2 tablespoons of the sugar until thoroughly combined. Press on bottom and up sides of 9-inch pie plate. Chill until firm, about 30 minutes.

Meanwhile, in small saucepan, sprinkle gelatin over lemon juice and water. Let stand 1 minute. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until gelatin is completely dissolved, about 2 minutes. Chill, stirring occasionally, until mixture mounds slightly when dropped from spoon, about 20 to 30 minutes.

In large mixing bowl, beat eggs at high speed until thick and lemon-colored, about 5 minutes. Gradually add remaining sugar, beating until blended. Gradually beat in chilled gelatin mixture. Pour into prepared crust. Chill until set, several hours or overnight. Garnish with fruit and mint leaves, if desired.

ANSWER — Susan Breckbill, Lincoln University, requested a recipe for sour cherries. Thanks to Marion Halter of Bridgeton, NJ; Amy High of Millerstown; and Carol Lownes of West Chester for sending recipes.

Cherry Pudding

1 cup sugar
3 tablespoons shortening (full)
1 cup milk
2 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt

Put in 9"x9" buttered baking dish. Mix 1 cup sugar, 1 cup water, 2 cups sour cherries. Bring to boil and pour over batter. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 to 35 minutes.

The dough should come to the top and cherries and syrup will form a sauce. Good made with peaches, blueberries or strawberries.

Pretty Cherry Pudding

Use any vanilla or chocalate pudding. (Instant, cook-n-serve or made from scratch).

Fill glass dish or individual dessert dishes ¾ full of pudding. Chill. Thicken, sweeten and chill enough sour cherries to fill dish.

Makes a pretty dessert that isn't excessively rich.

You can also use baked vanilla or chocolate custard, cooled. Fill with cherries.

Upside-Down Cherry Pudding (a pudding that exchanges top for bottom)

1½ cups all-purpose flour
1½ teaspoon baking powder-double action type
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ cup butter
1 cup sugar
1 egg, unbeaten
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup milk

Sauce:

¾ cup sugar
2½ cups sour cherries
½ cup boiling water
whipped cream

Sift flour, measure with baking powder and salt. Cream butter, add sugar gradually and continue creaming until light and fluffy. Beat in whole egg, stir in vanilla. Add sifted ingredients alternately with milk, beginning and ending with flour and beating well after each addition.

Turn into a greased 9-inch square pan, 3" deep. Prepare sauce by heating sugar, cherries, juice and boiling water, and pour it over the batter. Place in moderate oven 350 degrees and bake 35-40 minutes or until pudding just begins to shrink from sides of pan and top is golden brown. When baked, cherries and sauce will be on the bottom. Serve warm by spooning into individual dishes with some of the sauce over each serving. Top with whipped cream. 8 servings.

Amanda Kolb At Home With Her Sisters And Brother

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Amanda Kolb has a job to do. She is a Lancaster County Dairy Darling. That means she helps the dairy princess tell others how good milk is for them. She hands out samples of cheese and dairy drinks. She helps out with the program called Ag in the Classroom. She takes a calf or a cow to classrooms and tells them how she takes care of it and what she needs to do to show it.

Lancaster County Dairy Darling Amanda Kolb promotes milk and dairy animals.

"I like kitty cats," Allison said. She also likes giraffes, but doesn't have any to hold.

Allison, 4, and Becky, 6, have lots of fun both inside and outside the barn.

Amanda is nine years old. She hopes to become the county dairy princess when she is older. Later, she plans to be a lawyer.

Amanda has lots of talents. "I kind of like to write," she said. Recently, she was selected as a winner in the Newpaper In Education Week Journalism Contest. More than 19,000 students participated in the contest. A copy of her winning story appears on page B12.

Amanda is in cheerleading, swimming, gymnastics, softball and Girl Scouts.

As a 4-H Dairy Club member, Amanda shows cows and calves at many shows. At the Manheim Farm Show, she was chosen as the Dairy Junior Showmanship Champion. Her 15-year-old brother was chosen as the Senior Showmanship Champion. This meant that she had to compete against her brother for Showmanship Champion overall.

Her brother got it, but nine-year-old Amanda was proud that it took the judges a while to decide.

Amanda's parents are Deborah and Dennis Kolb. Amanda has two sisters and one brother: Matthew, 15; Rebecca, 6; and Allison, 4.

Matt is in Penn Manor FFA, 4-H Dairy Club, football, track, and weight lifting. He plans to major in agriculture at Penn State. Someday he hopes to take over the family business, Melvin Kolb Cattle Dealing.

Becky finds a favorite resting place in the barn. She said, "I like to work in the barn and Jerry (the hired man) said that I'm a good worker."

Becky is in kindergarten. She plays soccer and is a daisy Girl Scout. She considers herself a tomboy who likes to help in the barn. She said the hired men nicknamed her Mike. She likes to tease her brother. She said, "Jerry (the hired man) said that I do better than Matt."

Matt takes his sisters' teasing all in stride. He doesn't think it's so bad having three sisters because they do about everything he tells them to do.

Four-year-old Allison is the dancing and music lover in the family. She said, "I like cows, kitty cats, bunnies, dogs, and giraffes."

If you drive on Route 283, near Route 741 exit, look for the long barns with the name, Melvin Kolb Inc. Dairy Cow Sales written on it. That is where the Kolb kids are busy at work.

WHITNEY, MY HERO
By Amanda Kolb

On a rainy, cool day at the farm show, I was taking Whitney, my heifer, for water. When suddenly I heard a BANG!

To my surprise a steer cage was flinging through the air with a steer, wild with rage, still tied between the bars hitting a woman and breaking her leg. Unexpectedly, his halter became untied. He ran wildly through the barn turning the corner and heading down the aisle towards Whitney and me. I froze in panic. Deliberately, Whitney stepped in between me and the huge steer. He rammed Whitney into me and I was pushed into the wall. The steer charged again but Whitney fought back butting the steer with her head. The steer turned and ran into a group of cows enabling a farmer to grab the rope and tie him tight.

Whitney saved my life, she is my hero!

Farm Women Societies

Lancaster Society 1

Lancaster Society of Farm Women No. 1 met recently at the home of Mrs. Lloyd Sheaffer, Lititz, with Mrs. Raymond Newcomer serving as co-hostess. The meeting opened with greetings from president Mrs. George Zahn. Mrs. Roy Brubaker led the group in singing several songs. Mrs. Monroe Widders had charge of devotions. Twenty-two members answered roll call by naming a place they have traveled and its capitol. Judy Greenleaf, county Farm Women president, was in attendance and extended her greetings. She announced that the Spring Rally will be held on May 23.

Rachel Bollinger of the Book Exchange Committee announced that there are books available for those who wish to read. Mrs. Roy Brubaker announced that the group will meet for breakfast on March 23 at the Country Table Restaurant in Mt. Joy. The group will be entertained by Society No. 33 at the Farm and Home Center on March 14 at 6:30 p.m. The Shelter for Abused Women was suggested as a county project, and the group will be sewing at the Lancaster General Hospital on April 22.

The speaker for the afternoon was Mrs. Scott Garman, a member of the Society, who told of her adventures in England and Scotland, in conjunction with a two-month tour of many European countries.

The Society will meet again at the Farm and Home Center on April 6, when they will entertain Society No. 4.

Perry Society 1

Perry County Farm Women Group 1 met at the home of June Hertzler, Loysville, on February 21. A devotional led by June Hertzler compared the pruning of trees in spring to the pruning in spiritual lives.

Members responded to roll call by telling of an emergency they had experience.

Dr. Beverly Kimpel, a family practitioner from Perry County, spoke to the group about several health topics and answered questions.

Lap robes, brought back from the January meeting, will be given to Perry Village nursing home.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Cindy Thoman on March 28. The speaker will show how to macrame a lawn chair.

Have You Heard?

Feeling Stressed Out?

When your stomach churns, your back and neck ache and you're overcome with fear, your body and mind are reacting to stress.

Feeling stressed is a normal reaction. Everyone experiences it. We've all had a bad day, week or month. Everyone feels "bummed out" at times.

Things usually get better. But, when you're feeling stressed out, it may be hard to remember that good times are ahead.

A low test score, a fight with a friend or an argument with a spouse can cause stressed-out feelings.

You can react to stress in three ways — get angry, withdraw or take charge.

Anger and aggression get attention, but cause more stress. Aggressive actions, such as drinking too much, driving recklessly, breaking things or striking out at someone doesn't solve the problem.

But, it can cause your self-esteem to take a dive.

Even withdrawing can be destructive. People who feel distressed need to share their feelings, seek understanding and get help from others. Withdrawing from people creates isolation.

If you're feeling stressed out, talk to a friend. Listen to music to relax, get some physical exercise or spend time doing something fun and enjoyable.

Although these techniques don't solve the problem, they can help you feel better and make decisions about the action you need to resolve the stressful situation.

To face the real issues of the problem, talk with someone you trust. It could be a coach, parent, minister or good friend. Explain the problem and work out the options for solving it.

It's possible to work out any problem.

Build Children's Self-Esteem

Research indicates that a healthy self-esteem is a basic ingredient to children's growth and development.

Adults who feel good about themselves are usually more productive and have healthier personal relationships. And, a healthy self-esteem is rooted in early-life experiences and relationships with others.

Here are some tips to help your children develop healthy self-esteem.

* Children need to feel understood. Listen to your children's ideas. Respect the child's goals, dreams and feelings. Empathize with your child's feelings and emotions.

You don't have to agree with every point to accept the other person's ideas as worthy of attention.

* Respect your child as a unique individual — unlike any other member of the family or someone in society. Help them learn what talents, strengths or special personality qualities they have to offer the world.

Avoid comparisons with brothers and sisters.

* It's important to feel capable and competent. Affirm your child's positive behaviors and qualities.

Choose activities and responsibilities that are right for their ages. Allow children to make choices when they're old enough and the occasion is right.

Encourage them to explore unique interests.

New York Chooses Dairy Promoter Of The Year

SYRACUSE, NY — For the second year in a row, the Jefferson County Dairy Promotion Team has been selected for the 1989-90 "Promoters of the Year" at the 28th annual Dairy Princess Pageant, February 19, at the Sheraton Inn.

During her reign, county dairy princess Deborah Eastman and her three alternates accumulated 668 points toward the highest incentive award category available from American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc. (ADADC). Her alternates were Darby Rudd (current Jefferson County Dairy Princess), Lisa Clark and Christy Eddy.

Together and with the help of their families, the young women participated in school programs, the placement of news articles, speeches to civic groups, radio spots, and many other dairy promotion activities. A total of 11,500 miles was traveled.

American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc. is a dairy promotion organized representing dairy producers in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

Debbie Eastman of Jefferson County receives "Dairy Promoter of The Year" Award from ADADC Manager of County Promotions, Shirley Griffith.

It's the right time to apply lime

Lime application during the winter allows the limestone time to react and gives you the advantage of rich, pH-balanced soil for your spring planting. Winter ground conditions also reduce soil compaction and rutting during spreading.

Satellite Conference Studies Ways To Prevent Soil Compaction

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — What do silage trucks, grain bins, manure spreaders, and combines have in common?

For one thing, they are major contributors to soil compaction on the field.

And soil compaction contributes to plant disease, yield problems, and other factors detrimental to farming.

Panelists answer questions from the satellite audience at the conference. Left to right: Marvin Hall, assistant professor of forage management; Greg Roth, assistant professor orf corn management; and Lynn Hoffman, agronomy senior research associate.

Lynn Hoffman, agronomy senior research associate at Penn State, spoke to farmers at a Crop Production Satellite Seminar broadcast from Mitchell Studio B at University Park. The broadcast was "downlinked" to various locations throughout the state, including Hershey, Hazleton, Williamsport, and other sites.

"The most common cause of compaction problems is getting on the field at the wrong time of the year, (using) tillage tools, discs or plows, or getting on the field with heavy loads," said Lynn Hoffman, agronomy senior research associate at Penn State.

Broadcast downlinked

Hoffman spoke to farmers at a Crop Production Satellite Seminar broadcast from Mitchell Studio B at University Park. The broadcast was "downlinked" to various locations throughout the state, including Hershey, Hazleton, Williamsport, and other sites.

At University Park, signals were sent to G Star 1 satellite on the Ku Band, Channel 12, at 11,927 megahertz. At the Hershey downlink location, about 30 farmers listened to Penn State crop experts on studies dealing with soil fertility, compaction, plant diseases, and pest problems.

Hoffman spoke about soil compaction and the effects on crop growth.

In general, the higher clay content of the soil, the more likely a farmer will encounter compaction.

Test for compaction

But farmers must first be able to test for compaction and determine if, in fact, other problems exist in the field as well.

The best way is to test for compaction. Sometimes the compaction layer could be on the surface or up to 8 inches below the surface, according to Hoffman.

To identify a compaction problem, a farmer can dig with a backhoe or use a shovel to find the compaction zone. Or if they take a soil sample, the common soil probe, if used to push the soil, can determine where compaction exists.

"If you have a compaction problem, there'll be a spot there where you'll feel some resistance and all at once that soil probe will go down much easier," said Hoffman. "If this shows up in your field more than once or twice, try to watch and see if it's showing up at about a consistent level." Hoffman said the compaction could be deeper than the topsoil.

Reach beneath topsoil

Another way to measure compaction is with a ¾ -inch rod with a handle welded to the top. The probe is long enough to reach deep beneath the topsoil. Or farmers can use a penetrometer — a device like the soil probe which includes a resistance dial to determine a range of compaction layers.

"It's important that you recognize just where that compaction layer is in the soil," he said. There are a few ways a farmer can relieve compaction. One is by planting some crops that have the ability to penetrate the compaction layers (such as soybeans, buckwheat, or alfalfa) which have a good rooting system, said Hoffman.

For a shallow compaction problem, standard tillage equipment can break the zone. For a deeper compaction problem, farmers can use deep tillage equipment, such as a V-ripper or a paraplow to get the job done.

It's important, according to Hoffman, that farmers find out exactly how deep the problem is. "You don't want to relieve that compaction with your deep tillage tool any deeper than that compaction layer. If you come back in there with a piece of heavy equipment and recompact the soil, it's going to compact down there at the depth you actually relieved the compaction layer the last time."

Modify equipment

Preventing compaction is another way farmers can curb the problem through the use of equipment modifications.

In the case of a manure spreader, a farmer can use 1020 truck tires with tandem axles. This spreads out the compaction zone. Also, flotation tires (using 22-28 pounds of pressure per tire) can create a different footprint to help distribute the weight of the load that is placed on the spreader.

"The amount of compaction you cause on a load will be in direct proportion to the amount of air pressure you have in that tire," said Hoffman.

Using a different type of tire or tire width is an important consideration, "one that you can carry out to other tools on your farm like silage wagons and grain wagons," he said.

Tandem tires

Front tractor wheels also hold to about 30 to 50 percent of the total load. But using tandem tires or wider tires can also help considerably in reducing compaction. Also, a four-wheel drive tractor reduces compaction because it reduces tire slippage.

ADADC Elects Officers

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Raymond Johnson, president of American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc. (ADADC), was re-elected at a board meeting on Feb. 20, held after the ADADC 31st Annual Meeting, at the Sheraton Inn in Liverpool.

Johnson has served as president of ADADC for eight years. He serves as secretary of United Dairy Industry Association (UDIA), and is a member of the UDIA personnel and finance committees. He is also a member of the National Dairy Board.

Johnson operates a 450-acre farm in Schaghticoke, Rensselaer County, with his son. They milk 75 Holsteins.

Also elected were: vice president, Ronald Harris of Stanley, Ontario County; second vice president, Allen Ostrander of Theresa, Jefferson County; treasurer, Robert Harrison of Skaneateles, Onondaga County; and secretary, David Hardie of Lansing, Tompkins County.

Satellite Conference

Combines are another compaction culprit. Often, the grain tanks hold 160-180 bushels of corn and create enormous pressure on the tires — and lots of compaction on the soil.

Trucks in the field, holding the grain from the combine, often support 320-350 bushels of corn at a time (especially with high-moisture corn). Instead of bringing the truck onto the field and creating tire traffic compaction, the farmer should park the truck in an adjacent lane and unload the corn to the truck off the field.

"We must manage to elminate or not cause soil compaction on our farms, or we must manage our inputs to reduce the problem should it already exist," said Hoffman.

Study corn hybrids

Also at the satellite conference, experts said that corn growers should study corn hybrids carefully and consider the conditions of the farm itself before selecting the seed.

Corn hybrid differences could amount to a difference of 30-40 bushels/acre of yield potention, according to Greg Roth, assistant professor of corn management at Penn State.

"One of the most important characteristics is hybrid maturity," said Roth at the satellite seminar. "This is important because we want to have a hybrid that matures year-in and year-out on your particular farm."

Hybrids are classified in two maturity types: relative maturity and degree-day. Relative maturity includes the anticipated amount of moisture content. The degree-day measures heat units or growing degree days between planting and physiological maturity.

Hybrid factors

Other factors going into the selection of a hybrid include:

- Planting day, end use, and harvest time.
- Soil types. Should we use long- or short-season hybrids?
- Drought potential. Is the seed drought stress-resistant under a range of maturities?
- Standability. For grain producers who are going to have corn on the stalk till late November or early December, will it tolerate different stress factors, including corn bore, stalk rot, and other problems?
- Disease tolerance and resistance. Farmers should identify specific problems with diseases on their farms.
- Yield. Hybrid test reports and other sources of information can provide these factors.
- Cold tolerance. "It's especially critical if we're planting corn in no-till environments where soils are cool and moist and the corn plant is growing very slowly," said Roth. "It's especially critical when we're planting corn in no-till environments with a high level of residue." There are a number of stresses, including insect and slug damage, that the corn seedling can be exposed to.

Yield stability for the hybrid is important. There are two types: offensive and defensive hybrids. Offensive hybrids provide good yields under optimum conditions. The defensive hybrids maintain a good yield across a wide range of growing conditions.

"In most cases in Pennsylvania, we want to be looking for these defensive characteristics," said Roth.

Once the characteristics about hybrids and field data are compared, farmers should create a plan of action for selecting a specific hybrid for a specific situation on the farm, according to Roth.

AND BLUE.

Black shank and blue mold are two of the biggest enemies a leaf of burley or flue-cured can have. And on a cost-per-acre basis, nothing protects tobacco plants from these diseases like Ridomil.®

Just one application (at labelled rates) in the field before transplanting fights black shank, blue mold and Pythium all season long.

Ridomil stops disease on contact in the soil. Then its systemic action allows it to be absorbed into the plant through the roots, keeping it safe from disease. You get a healthier plant, higher quality tobacco.

So this season, use Ridomil. Before a few of tobacco's biggest enemies beat your bottom line black and blue.

If you want to know more about Ridomil, call Furney Todd any Monday on the Monday Hotline, sponsored by CIBA-GEIGY. 1-800-862-2229.

ing the dairy message throughout the state.

Held in conjunction with the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc. (ADADC) Annual Meeting, the pageant hosted princesses representing 36 counties. Selection for the prestigiuos position was based on a four-part judging process which took into account knowledge of the dairy industry, communication skills, creativity, and poise. The young women were evaluated during personal interviews, speech delivery to an adult audience, and elementary school presentations. Personal scrapbooks created by the dairy princesses were also judged.

Speech winners were awarded $150 for their three to five minute presentation. Winners were: Jessica Chittenden, Karen Pritchard, and Amy Perry of Wyoming County.

Winners in the scrapbook competition were Jessica Chittenden, Bethany Spinler of Randolph, Cattaraugus County, and Kelly Acomb of Dansville, Steuben County. Each received $75.

A "Miss Congeniality" award was presented to Kristy Clemons of Holland, Erie County. She was chosen by her fellow princess for being friendly and outgoing.

Tammy Skellie, former Washington County Dairy Princess, received the Memorial Scholarship award of $500. The award is based on dairy promotion activities while serving as a county dairy princess, a 400-word essay submitted with the application, and financial need.

During her 1986-87 reign, she and her court achieved the highest level of accomplishment in New York state. Skellie is a senior majoring in communications at the College of Saint Rose in Albany.

The Golden Cow Award was given to Arlden "Sonny" Olsen Jr. of Eagle Bridge, Rensselaer County. As treasurer of his county Dairy Princess Committee since 1967, he has been instrumental in raising funds to meet the yearly budget.

In addition to being a technician for Eastern Artificial Inseminators Cooperative, Olsen ran a farm with his father. He is a member of Eastern A.I. 50,000 Cow Club, master of the Van Rensselaer Lodge and Hoosick Grange, and president of the Tri-County Holstein Club and Hoosick Falls Alumni Club.

The dairy princess program is designed to promote the consumption and sale of milk and dairy products to consumers. The program also aspires to create better relations between urban and rural residents through one-on-one communication at the local level. The program is sponsored by the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council.

American Dairy Association and Dairy Council is a dairy promotion organization representing dairy farmers and producers in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

Farm Women Societies

Berks County Farm Women Group 11 met at the home of Wendy Lingle for the February meeting. The guest for the evening was Carol Siegrist from "Country Gardens," R.D. #1, Myerstown. She spoke on herbs, their history, uses, and how they compliment different dishes.

Recipes and the directions for microwave drying of herbs were given. Carol brought flats of herbs. Each member made a window garden of three different herbs to take home to grow and use. The presentation was great.

Members had roll call and answered by telling how their husbands proposed; members found out the husbands weren't romantic at all.

Groceries were collected for Berks Food Pantry. Seeds were collected for Spring Rally seed boxes. Addresses of servicemen for Berks County and some of the members' family and friends were shared.

The meeting was closed with a plant in a bag auction. The hostess served a great red and cherry dessert.

The next meeting will be a tour of Repperts Kitchens in Lebanon.

Blair Farm Woman Operates Party Room

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

ROARING SPRING (Blair Co.)— Shirley Kensinger can't remember a time when she didn't want to have her party room. "Shirley's Something Special," located on the picturesque Kensinger farm is her dream come true.

"It's just a dream I've always had," she smiles. "But, while I was raising my three children and we were farming full time, I considered that my job. My party room was a dream and I didn't know if it would ever be a reality."

Thirty years ago as a busy, young mother who helped her husband on their 265-acre farm, Shirley began baking wedding cakes. "It was something that just grew," she remembers. "Before long I was baking birthday cakes or cakes for any special occasion."

Then, the children grew up and, when Shirley wasn't needed at home quite as much, she accepted a job as dining room manager of a local restaurant.

"I loved it," she remembers. "I liked the challenge and I learned a lot about managing a restaurant. It brought back my old dream of owning a party room."

Shirley continued to bake their special-occasin cakes and when Wilton cake pans offered a special school in Chicago where she could learn how to make crystalized flowers from icing, Shirley signed up for the course.

"When I came home, I knew it was time to give up my job and go into the cake business full time," she says.

Persuading her husband to build her a kitchen was no easy job. "He grumbled a lot and was sure I wouldn't make it, but he built the kitchen anyway," she laughs.

The cakes were such a success that Shirley soon had to hire some part-time help to keep up with the demand. "I'm the only one in the area who seems to know how to make these icing flowers," she admits. "I've had orders from as far away as Philadelphia."

With the children grown, Fred cut back on farming and began raising feeder calves. He is also a farm auctioneer. He had more time for chores which had been put off when work pressures were greater.

Mother Nature took its toll on the big farm house where the Kensinger family had lived for nearly three decades, and the side porch became very much in need of repair.

"It was either tear it down or add a room," Shirley told her husband. "I told him that, at long last, here was the perfect opportunity for my party room."

"Fred laughed and told me I was getting too old to take on a challenge that big. But, I presisted and finally won him over."

The Kensingers did most of the work on the new addition themselves. While the building was in progress, Shirley began her party room idea in the dining room of the big farm house. She could serve parties of up to 12 and, it was an immediate success.

When the new room was completed, she had room for 45. "I did all of my own decorating," she says modestly. "I even papered the walls my[illegible]"

Shirley chose the colors carefully blending the patterns and designs of everything from the drapes and wall decorations to the pattern of the china and the napkin rings. Predominent colors are shades of pink accented with contrasting black.

The carpet was laid one day and "Shirley's Something Special" opened the next. "That was December 18, 1989, and we've been busy over since," Shirley remembers.

She serves card clubs, rehearsal dinners, club meetings, baby showers, wedding showers, or family reunions.

"In this area, country home cooking is still the big thing," Shirley says. "I would like to serve some gourmet-type items, but the home cooking is what most people seem to want."

She does add one special dish to each event. "Something they didn't ask for, but are willing to try. It's always a hit."

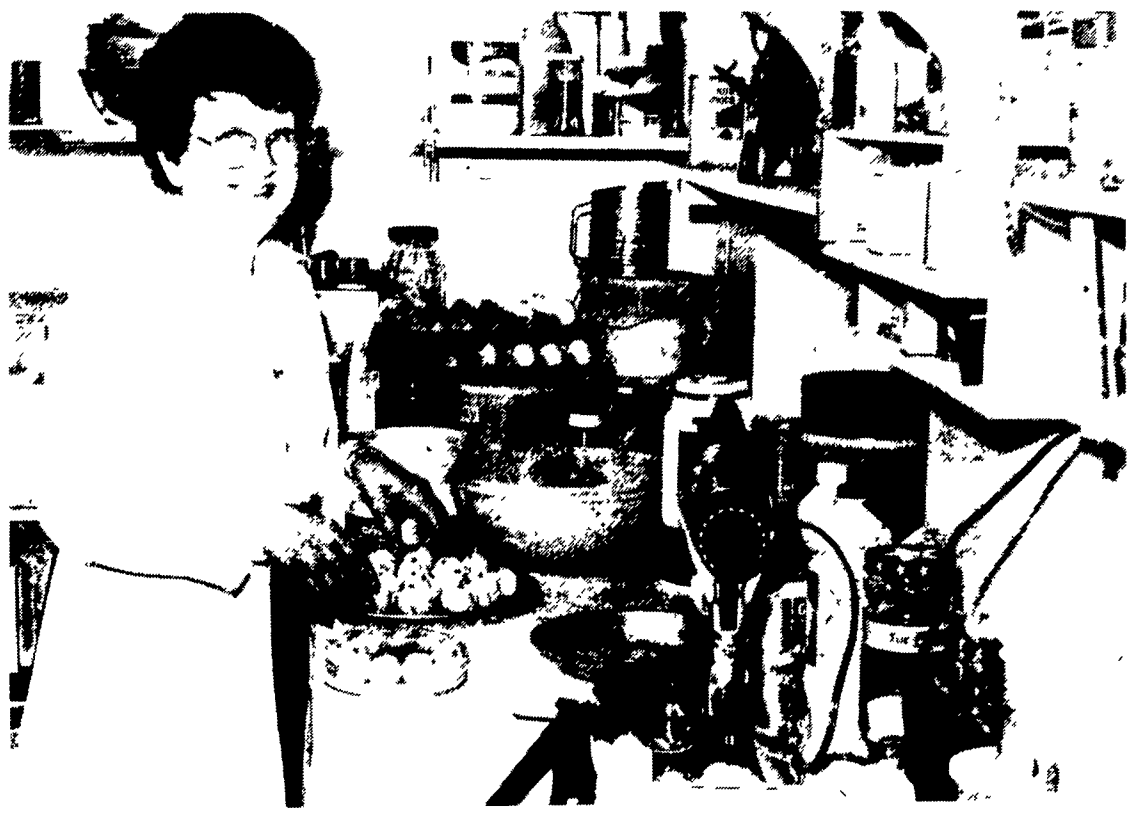
Shirley now has five regular part-time workers. During the busy summer season she hires an additional five. Her married daughter is one of her best helpers, as is her husband, Fred.

"It isn't all fun and games," Shirley is quick to admit. "It's hard work and long hours. I'm always meeting a deadline. When I was cooking for my family, I could put them off for a half-hour. You don't do that with the public. In the summer she often works until 1 or 2 in the morning and is back up at 6 a.m. One weekend last summer, she baked wedding cakes for 1,700 people."

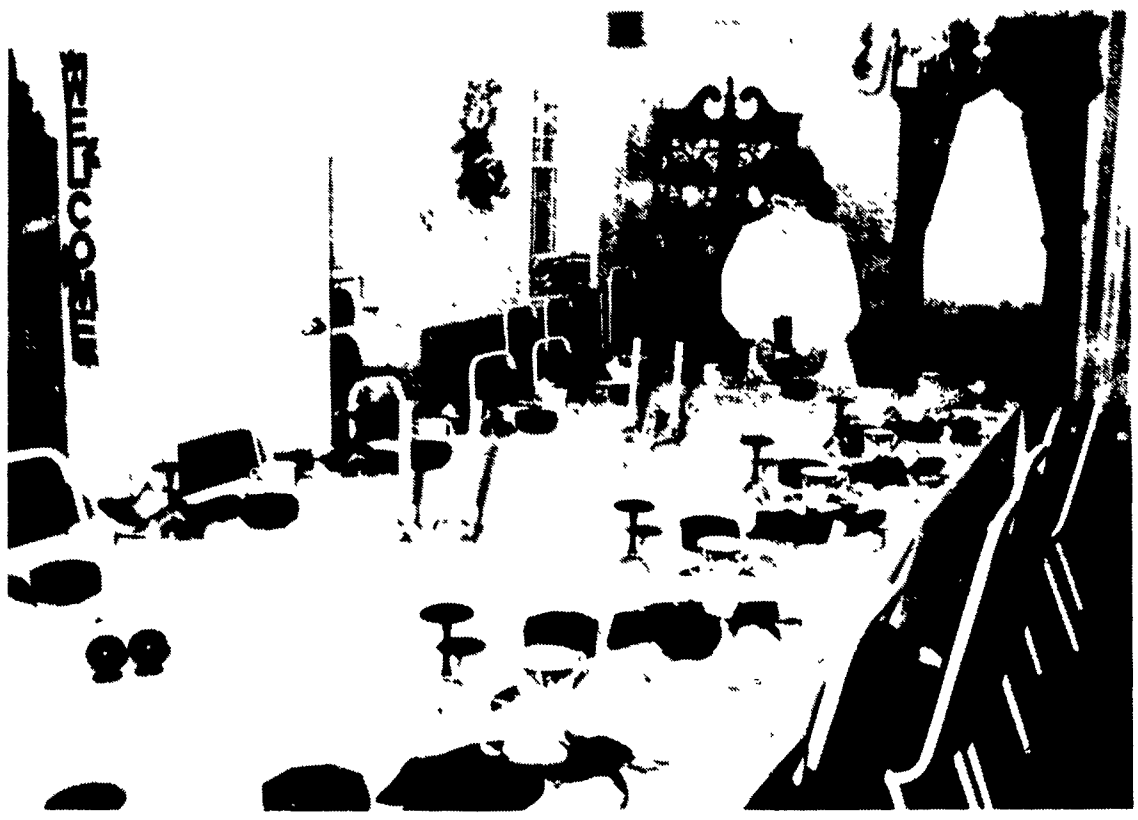
Shirley also does some catering and has carry-out specialty foods. "I think I'm going to have to give up my Christmas cookies," she admits.

"I used to make 1,200 dozen and then hold an open house. They would all be bought in one day. But, I just can't do everything. Something has to go."

She says she is always amazed at the number of people she talks with who are bored. "I couldn't be bored if I live to be 100," she smiles. "I figure we only get one crack at life and, I'm going to live it to the fullest. And, I'm extremely lucky, I've seen my dream come true. I might be working hard, but, I'm doing something I love."



A three-room building behind the farm house is the location of Shirley's kitchen. A lot of the cooking for "Shirley's Something Special" is done here.



Shirley Kensinger in the party room of Shirley's Something Special. She did all of the wallpapering and decorating herself.

Appetizers are served in the [illegible]ing room. Here, the table is decorated for Easter.

Until about 1916, all the sour cream used in the United States was homemade. The advent of the cream separator in the late 1800s led to the manufacture of sour cream in dairy plants.

Some stories suggest that, during biblical times, people in the Middle East discovered yogurt when they left milk in a warm place.

Butter is one of the oldest known dairy products, having been discovered about 4,000 years ago. It was accidentally churned in an animal-skin pouch, slung on the back of a horse or camel The pouch bounced as the animal moved, churning the cream or milk into the substance known as butter.

Poultry Federation Plans Fund-Raising Banquet

Chrisholm will provide entertainment at the Pennsylvania Poultry Federation fund-raising event.

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — A large turnout is expected at the Hershey Convention Center on April 25 to support the Pennsylvania Poultry Federation and enjoy the comedy-impressions of Finis Henderson and the country/pop music of Chisholm. Since proceeds after expenses provide 75 percent of the Federation's operating budget, the Annual Fund Raising Banquet enjoys a loyal following.

The gala event is always well attended because of its carefully selected meals and exciting professional entertainment. Finis Henderson and Chisholm are young rising stars in the entertainment field and they are sure to "bring the house down" with laughter and applause. However, the real reason the industry and its suppliers crowd into the Hershey Convention Center every spring is to assure the continuation of the Pennsylvania Poultry Federation. The state association is the only vehicle the commercial poultry and egg industry has to protect its interests at the local, state, and national level. The Federation is the organized voice of the Pennsylvania poultry and egg industry that helped them survive avian influenza and currently cope with Salmonella enteritidis. The Federation is a lobbying organization that represents the industry within government agencies, universities and other agricultural organizations. As one ticket salesperson commented, "It is a great evening for a worthy cause." For ticket information, contact the Pennsylvania Poultry Federation at 500 N. Progress Ave., Harrisburg, PA 17109 or call (717) 652-7530.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

With the coming of spring there will be many changes. We see the wild geese flying north and the tulips and daffodils are blooming. Our house sparrows are beginning to build new nests. Soon we will plant a big garden. But, the biggest change in our lives will be planning to move from our old farmhouse.

Our son, Philip, and his wife, Lisa, have taken over the operation of the farm for the last year. As they want to live closer to their work, we will have to build another house.

We've chosen a hillside location in our meadow about one-half a mile from our present home. Here we plan to build a log house. All winter my husband has drawn one floor plan after another try and meet our needs. The architect has drawn extensive plans to suit our wants and the requirements of our first class township. We shall have to get several permits before construction can start.

I've often declared that I would never be a part of such a big building project. You see, the new kitchen which we built about 15 years ago caused me so much grief. But, we don't have much choice as a farmer should live close to his cows.

Actually, I cannot imagine moving the accumulation of 40 years to another house. And, so our other five children are scattered over the United States, it will not be easy to give them a piano or a high poster bed.

There are so many problems and decisions confronting us. When my parents had to move from their home, as the Highway Department declared eminent domain, they had three daughters to help them and we worked for weeks. Guess I'll just have to take it a day at a time.

Berks Countians 'Hoe-Down' At 4-H Jamboree

CONNIE LEINBACH
Berks Co. Correspondent

READING (Berks Co.) — There may have been a lot of puzzled faces, but every one of the Berks Countians who tried hoe-down dancing was smiling last Saturday night at the 4-H "Raise the Roof Jamboree."

The event, held in the 4-H building at the Berks County Agricultural Center, marked the kickoff of the the last phase of a fund-raising campaign to build a 10,000 square foot pole barn beside the show ring.

Rick Kauffman, Penn State extension agent and 4-H coordinator, was pleased with the big turnout. There were about 300 advanced ticket sales, he said, and about 125 showed up at the door.

"It went beyond our expectations," he said, adding that Saturday evening was so much fun that the 4-H advisory committee would like to have another hoe down. "People are really hungry for it," he said about the wholesome, family fun.

The Blue Marsh Jiggers began the hoe-down with a demonstration, clicking their tap-shoe clad feet to the rhythms plucked by the Blue Mountain Gang.

Caller Keith Brintzenhoff took the jiggers through an intricate series of steps, much to the delight of the crowd.

Then, Brintzenhoff called on the spectators to form squares so that they could begin dancing.

"How many of you have done this before?" he asked. There was a show of hands. "Then we'll start out with an easy one and take you through it first," he said.

Couples went through the steps for the figure eight dance, and after the music began, there was a lot of laughter as the dancers tried to comply with the instructor.

One square of dancers toward the back of the dance floor just stood there swaying to the beat of the music, sometime swinging each other around, but mostly looking to the stage.

"We're lost," said Kenneth Leiby, one of the members of that group, with a grin and a laugh.

Leiby, a general auctioneer from Hamburg R.D. 2, was the volunteer auctioneer for the evening of the many items gathered by volunteers for sale at the jamboree.

For sale were feed, farm implements, Winross trucks, an autographed pennant from the Hershey

Bears, swine injection, and other items.

Kauffman said the auction raised about $1,400, which he said also was beyond the group's hopes.

Leiby and Mike Firestine, senior lending officer for Lebanon Valley National Bank, auctioned the items.

Mary Ann Keith, agrilending officer with the bank, said she and Firestine had made a lot of calls in the last several weeks gathering items for the auction.

"People were real willing to donate items as soon as we told them what it was for," Keith said.

That's because they were donating for a good cause, Firestine said.

"Four-H builds character," he said. "It helps keep the good kids good."

In the next several months, the 4-H Development Council will plan how to raise the $200,000 needed to build the pavilion, said Gery Fisher, president. Although the pole barn has not been designed yet, Kauffman said the barn is needed to hold animal showing and sales events.

"There are a lot of 4-H events in here that should be outside," Fisher said.

The committee wants to raise $200,000 for the project, Fisher said. In addition to that, however, more money will be needed to eventually replace the 4-H center roof at a cost of $30,000. The committee also would like to pave the rest of the drive around the center.

This is needed, Fisher said, because the center is rented out for wedding receptions and it's hard for people in their good clothes to walk on the gravel.

About $30,000 has been raised so far through banquets, petting zoos, and publication of the annual 4-H yearbook, Kauffman said.

Dave Kline was the master of ceremonies for the jamboree.

Fiddlers with the Blue Mountain Gang warm up for the 4-H Jamboree.

Bucks County Promotes 4-H

To promote Pennsylvania 4-H Week, Bucks County commissioners proclaimed 4-H Day in Bucks County on Wednesday.

Receiving the proclamation was the Bucks County 4-H Ambassador, Lori Colliton, Newtown. A member of the Bucks County Seeing Eye Puppy 4-H Club, she was chosen to promote 4-H in Bucks County for one year.

The 77-year-old 4-H program addresses the needs and interests of youth who live in rural and urban areas. The majority of Bucks County 4-H members do not live on farms. Members may choose projects such as microwave cooking, photography, woodworking, rocketry, sewing, wildlife, small engines, and bicycle. Agriculture-related projects are also popular and include horses, gardening, pet care, embryology, and landscaping.

The 4-H program also tries to address issues that concern today's youth. "At Your Disposals" is a 4-H project that concentrates recycling products. "At Home Alone" helps "latch-key" children. The Expanded Food and Nutrition (EFNEP) 4-H Program teaches good nutrition habits to low-income youth.

Adult volunteer leaders and teen leaders play an important role in guiding, advising, and encouraging their 4-H members.

Besides participating in individual 4-H projects, youth in the county are given many other opportunities, 4-H members may go to summer 4-H camp, officer training, and regional/state competitive events. Bucks County 4-H'ers have been part of international exchange programs by going to countries such as Japan, Germany, United Kingdom, and Switzerland.

For more information about the program, contact the Cooperative Extension office in Bucks County, (215) 345-3283.

The club will be selling 4-H cookies until its next meeting on March 25. The price is $1.50 a box. The group is having a contest for the best cover for the recipe book. All members can enter and will vote for the best one. A demonstration was given by Jill Musselwhite on cross stitching.

MAMMA Captures Best Of The Show

TOWSON, MD. ... Mid-Atlantic dairy farmers captured three blue ribbons and "Best of Show" honors recently, but it was not for their champion Holstein, Guernsey, Jersey, Ayrshire, or their Brown Swiss.

The dairy farmers of the Middle Atlantic Milk Marketing Association (MAMMA) captured the coveted "Best of Show" with their 1990 fluid milk radio advertising campaign. The campaign, created by the W.B. Doner advertising company of Baltimore, praises the merits of milk in a humorous, tongue-in-cheek series of commercials-- "Antarctica", "Renaissance", and "UFOs".

The "Best in Baltimore" show recognizes and rewards creative excellence. The regional competition is the first step towards the 1991 Regional and National ADDY Awards of the American ...tis...

Mid-Atlantic dairy farm... captured two other best in their category for their chocolate milk radio commercial and for their fluid milk television commercial "Grandma's Shorts", named best of regional and national radio commercials, is the zany chocolate milk radio spot in which Tom Posten, the handyman on the Bob Newhart Show, recalls some rather bizarre and hilarious childhood memories related to cold chocolate milk.

The "Coaches" commercial that features basketball coaches Villanova's Rollie Massimino and Georgetown's John Thompson, was selected as the best television spot of regional and national ads.

This award joins other awards for advertising excellence received by the dairy farmers ...

What Do You Know About Garlic?

Well known for its culinary benefits, the medicinal powers of garlic — an ancient natural remedy — are now the focus of scientific research. Take this quiz and test your garlic savvy.

1. Garlic has been shown to (a) ruin your social life (b) improve cardiovascular health (c) reduce cholesterol and blood pressure (d) help maintain healthy blood circulation (e) b, c, and d.

2. Allicin is (a) a popular song by rock star Elvis Costello (b) produced in garlic grown in China (c) believed to be responsible for much of garlic's biologic activity (d) b and c.

3. Garlic is most effective when it is (a) cooked (b) dried in tablet form (c) swallowed whole (d) in oil capsule form (e) b and c.

4. What is the recommended daily dose of garlic? (a) The equivalent of one generous portion of escargot (b) Two pieces of garlic bread (c) One clove of allicin-producing garlic (d) Two concentrated Kwai® garlic tablets taken 3 times daily (e) c and d.

5. What should you look for in a garlic tablet? (a) Fresh-breath coating (b) No odor-effect (c) High accilin yield (d) Standardized allicin yield (e) All of the above.

6. What are side effects associated with the recommended dosage of garlic tablets? (a) Headaches (b) Indigestion (c) A small rash (d) Loss of friends due to breath odor (e) None of the above.

7. The best reason to consume garlic is to (a) add spice to your life (b) keep enemies away (c) enhance your daily personal care regimen (d) gain membership to an herba-list organization (e) none of the above.

How Garlic Smart Are You?

Give yourself 10 points for each correct answer. Add up the points and calculate your garlic know-how.

60-70 points: Strong.

You have a good, health-conscious awareness of this wondrous herb. Enhance the value of garlic with proper eating and exercise.

40-50 points: Mild.

You need to brush up on some details. Consult your physician and pharmacist to make an educated decision about incorporating garlic into your diet.

Less than 40: Weak.

You may be ignoring an easy, natural addition to your personal care routine. Whether you have elevated cholesterol or are as fit as a fiddle, garlic may be a valuable supplement to your diet.

For a free sample of Kwai® Garlic Tablets call 1 (800) TRY-KWAI. For a list of references contact: The Garlic Advisory Board, 250 Park Avenue South, 9th Floor, New York, NY 10003.

ANSWERS

1. (e) Clinical studies suggest that garlic, taken regularly, may lower blood pressure, improve blood flow and reduce total cholesterol an average of 12% — a reduction that can cut the risk of heart attack by approximately 20%. 2. (d) Allicin — a chemical compound — is produced when garlic is cut or crushed. Researchers believe it is responsible for garlic's medicinal properties and its pungent odor. 3. (e) Cooking accelerates the destruction of allicin. Because the manufacturing process of oil capsules involves heating, all the allicin gets burned off. However, dried garlic has a high allicin yield — nearly three times that of fresh garlic. Kwai® Highly Concentrated Garlic Tablets are made of 100 percent Chinese garlic gently dried and compressed into coated tablets for maximum potency. 4. (e) Studies have shown that eating one clove of garlic a day may be sufficient to gain garlic's beneficial results. However, two odor-free concentrated garlic tablets, taken three times daily, contain the equivalent of one clove of garlic — without the odor. 5. (e) When choosing a garlic tablet, look for a standardized, high allicin yield and a coating for fresh breath and easy swallowing. 6. (e) There are virtually no side effects associated with the recommended daily dosage of garlic tablets. 7. (c) As you can see, garlic is much more than simply an odorous herb used as a cooking spice; preliminary data indicates that garlic may be useful as a nutritional supplement.

BARN PAINTING
Aim For The Best -
In Coating Film Thickness

To do it right use the finest kind of bristle brush evening out the coating into a film thickness that does not peel in normal moisture stress (found on most barn siding from outside and inside by livestock or stored animal feed.)

1. PREPARATION. Peeling old coatings (improperly brushed) needs to be removed. The best again is simply water blasting or power washing! High volume of water - medium pressure is best! Done professionally or do it yourself, especially on the easy to reach areas.
2. MAKING A NEW START spray on brush in painting on the renewed surface or resurfaced wood siding. The above mentioned AIM of coating thickness can prevent future peeling and resurfacing cost & effort. Simple, old fashioned brushing does most of the trick. This film will let moisture breathe through it. Depending on the amount of weather wear it can be recoated lightly in 10 years of more. Southern exposures usually wear faster.

Widows: Can They Survive On The Family Farm?

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

This is the third article in a series about obstacles widows face when they remain on the family farm.

MOUNT JOY (Lancaster Co.) — Two years ago, Doris Brubaker's husband complained of extreme weakness and then crumbled to the floor.

The shock of his sudden death was devasting to Doris. She said, "I wish we had had a week to discuss what should be done with the farm."

She echoed the sentiments of many other farm widows who said, "It's easier to get the farmwork done than it is to deal with the emotional lost."

Marvin Brubaker was only 55 years old when he died. He had expected to continue farming until he was at least 65.

After an illness of less than one week, undiagnosed stomach cancer claimed his life. He left an 80-acre farm with a stone and brick farmhouse on it. Both the Brubakers' sons and a daughter were married. The deceased Brubaker had been carrying the workload of farming his own land, plus renting additional 65- and a 70-acre plots of land to raise corn, wheat, and soybeans. Six years before his death, Brubaker had sold his dairy herd and started housing his neighbor's dry cows in the barn.

"Fortunately," Doris said, "I had taken care of the bookkeeping so I did not feel completely lost."

After much discussion with her children, Doris worked out a plan. She would continue her part time waitressing at Country Table Restaurant, feed the dry cows, and do the bookkeeping. Her two sons would continue their jobs as mail carrier and Sico truck driver and farm on the side.

"My sons' first love is to farm," Doris said. The sons said that field work is a hobby for them and that they want to finish what their dad had begun. The farm has been in the family since 1929.

Doris said, "It was purchased during the depression years, and that inspires me to remember that times might not always be easy, but we can make it."

As far as a plan, "We take one day at a time," Doris said. After the first year, the sons relinquished renting the 70-acre plot because it was too hectic to hold down full-time jobs and farm the land on the side.

But the family is determined to work together to keep the farm in the family. Doris said that she experienced no problems with the bank, but it is not practical for her to live alone in the large farmhouse. She had hoped her sons could built on the land but DER did not approve the land for building. The family is trying to subdivide the land so that one son and his family can buy the house while Doris continues to own the land.

Doris Brubaker, whose has been a widow for two years, remains on her Mount Joy farm. She feeds the dry cows and keeps the books. Her two married sons have full-time jobs but work on the farm evenings and weekends as a hobby. "Without their help, I could not have managed," Doris said.

Doris advises widows not to make hasty decisions after the death of a spouse. "Feelings change," she warned.

Her husband had bought a dog two days before his death. When her husband died, Doris decided to sell the dog.

"Fortunately, I waited. I became so attached to the dog that now I wouldn't want to part with him," she said.

She believes for family members to work together, each person must share feelings and don't hold anything back.

For herself, sharing the farming chores with her sons has been a good experience. "I couldn't have kept the farm without their help," she said.

Despite her sons' abilities to help carry on the farmwork, Doris said, "Emotionally, it's really tough."

She echoed the sentiments of many other farm widows who said, "It's easier to get the farmwork done than it is to deal with the emotional lost."

Doris finds great strength in her church.

"I take one day at a time," Doris said. "It takes faith to carry me through. I learned to lean on God more. I'm really thankful for my sons sticking with me."

Use Rolling Herd Averages To Manage Dairy Herd

GEORGE F.W. HAENLEIN
Extension Dairy Specialist
University Of Delaware

NEWARK, Del. — Again and again I am asked why we publish and promote rolling total herd milk, fat and protein averages? The question comes out of the concern that some state organizations publish and promote actual milking cows-only records. Either approach has merit.

When I read that a farmer has a herd average of 25,000 lbs. milk per cow, I have questions. How was this figure derived? Was this the total milk the farmer shipped to the processing plant every day on average for the last year? Or was this average only for cows that completed a lactation during the year? And over how many months — 10, 12 or more?

Individual outstanding cows are always in demand, of course. A herd made up of outstanding cows would draw people interested in selecting a dam for a future bull as a stud purchase or for a private herd, or maybe a future heifer buy. Deals like this can make a significant contribution to herd income. In fact, a few herds have become national and world leaders this way, generating important export deals.

Such herds succeed regardless of size. For example, Winterthur near Wilmington, Del., offered outstanding Holsteins for years as does Arlinda in California currently, and for Ayrshires, there's Ardrossan not far from Philadelphia.

However, the great majority of dairy herds derive only a minor portion of their herd income from the sale of outstanding cows and bulls. Most dairy herds, often termed "commercial," get between 80- and 90-percent of their herd income from the sale of milk. This means that the herd owner is interested in the herd milk average for all cows in the herd at a given time, not just those that complete a lactation during the year.

The herd owner is very much aware of those cows that did not complete a lactation during the year. How many were there, and what was the percentage in the herd? These cows, referred to as "dry" and/or "open," reduce the herd milk average, but continue to consume feed, require labor for feeding and milking, take up building space the same as the high-producing cows do and, possibly, incur additional veterinary costs.

Herd records on how much these cows produce reflect the financial efficiency story of the herd management. For this reason, I am more interested in publishing and promoting the rolling total herd averages. It gives the herd owner a measure of the number of freeloaders which the rest of the milking cows have to "carry" when it comes to paying bills.

Whether freeloaders are immediate or later candidates for the stockyard depends on total herd management objectives. But all the while, costs keep adding up from those cows that do not contribute their share in filling the farm tank.

Farmers talk with pride to their neighbors and farmers in other states, comparing notes on the performance of their cows and herds. And farmers deserve to have pride in their individual top cows. This enthusiasm carries dairy people through the daily drudgery and frustrations, and it feels good to outdo a neighbor or relative.

However, the business end of dairy farming requires that we reduce the number of freeloaders we feed and care for. Rolling Herd averages, not Milking Cows-Only or Completed Lactations-Only averages, reveal whether some cows are not producing up to par and how many.

Three important parameters can tell more precisely what is going on: age at first calving, calving interval and average days in milk. The age at first calving tells when heifers start paying back the investment in being raised to 24 months of age or later.

Calving interval is important, because it includes the number of days open or dry, and repeat breeders with long calving intervals are freeloaders. When the calving interval is longer, the Rolling Milk Production average per cow per year is less and fewer calves are produced and available per year. Also the farmer has fewer cows available for culling to improve genetics, and he has more veterinary and breeding bills, but less income from milk and sale of animals.

Average days in milk is another important parameter, because the more cows in the herd that have average days in milk before the middle of lactation, the more are in peak lactation and this helps fill up the herd tank faster, better and easier. These cows are the opposite of freeloaders.

All of these parameters correlate directly with money in the bank, an important consideration now that milk prices are so low. Overall, our interest in Rolling Herd averages, not just for milk, but for fat and protein content as well as somatic cell counts, is the best direction for better herd profitability.

N.J. Hort Expo Set

TRENTON, N.J. — The New Jersey FFA Horticultural Exposition, scheduled for the Quaker Bridge Mall, Route 1, Lawrenceville, consists of two state FFA events.

The state FFA floral design contest, sponsored by the New Jersey Florists' Association, will be held Friday, March 15. The State FFA Flower Show, with more than 600 plants and flower arrangements exhibited, will begin on Friday, March 15 and end on Sunday, March 17 at 6 p.m.

The floral design contest is open to all FFA members in New Jersey. Members will design two arrangements on location. One design will be assigned by the judges and the other will be the choice of the student. Arrangements will be scored and winners will be announced later that day. The students' designs will be available for sale after all scoring takes place. All proceeds will go towards premiums for the Flower Show.

Students competing in the Flower Show will be entering arrangements and plant material that they have designed or grown in school. More than 50 different theme classes are available for students to enter. Preparing an arrangement for a formal dinner party is one example of a theme class. Arrangements may be entered in the "fresh" or "silk and dried" categories.

Ribbons will be awarded to the top five entries in each class, and a rosette will be awarded to the best of division entry. In addition, the Best of Show Award will be presented.

Spark Plugs Fouled By Unleaded Fuel

Robert E. Leiby and David L. Dunbar
Lehigh County Cooperative Extension Office

Many owners of older tractors with engines designed to run on leaded fuel experience problems with spark plug fouling. This problem has coincided with the petroleum industry's movement toward marketing unleaded fuel without tetraethyl lead in it.

By now, most owners of older equipment realize that there were two reasons tetraethyl lead was added to gasoline. The main reason was to increase the octane rating of the fuel, enhancing the combustion characteristics of the fuel within the cylinder. The second reason was to provide lead oxide and lead halide by-products of combustion, which acted as a solid lubricant between the valves and the valve seats, preventing the hard valves from grinding their way through the softer seats.

One thing owners had not realized until recently is that unleaded fuel tends to run richer than leaded fuel. As a result, the spark plugs tend to foul with carbon, which makes the plugs misfire. This creates more carbon, compounding the problem. The result is spark plugs that fail to perform as desired after as few as 10 to 20 minutes of operation.

Fortunately, plug fouling appears to be isolated to tractors built before the mid-'70s, according to Jim Garthe, Penn State agricultural engineer. Tractors built during the late '40s and throughout the '50s seem to be particularly vulnerable, probably because of the 6-volt ignition system, which lacks adequate voltage to help burn off or through the carbon deposits.

Garthe says increasing spark plug heat range will not solve the problem, nor will changing the brand name or plug gap. The best solution is to lean out the fuel:air mixture slightly and to assure the timing advance is correct by using a timing light or dwell techometer.

If these recommendations fail to give both you and your engine renewed vitality, you should consider probing deeper. Check the compression of all cylinders and make sure they meet specifications. Monitor oil consumption and exhaust smoke to see if it is time for new piston rings or valve guide oil seals. Lastly, inspect valve clearances routinely to make sure that valve recession is not occurring due to the unleaded fuel.

Conservation Reserve Program Sign-Up

The tenth Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) sign-up will be March 4 through March 15. Basically, highly erodible land that was cropped in two of the last five years (1986-1990) could qualify. However, under new CRP program provisions, bids on eligible land will be accepted based on environmental benefits obtained per dollar of cost to USDA's Commodity Credit Corporation. Producers should not rely on bid amounts which have been accepted in previous years when making their bids.

Land eligibility requirements will be expanding from past sign-ups to include not only highly-erodible land, but also other cropland acres that might impair water quality.

CRP bids will be received only for contracts beginning in 1991 and bid acceptance determinations will be made after a nationwide review and evaluation.

Fifty percent cost share assistance will continue to be available to establish needed permanent vegetative cover, including trees, on the accepted acres. Annual rental payments for ten years also will be paid to CRP participants based upon their bid.

Contact the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service Office for more information at 215-395-4161.

Agricultural Conservation Easement Deadline

Friday, March 15 is the deadline for submitting an application to the Lehigh County Agricultural Land Preservation Board for the first 1991 funding round of the Lehigh County Agricultural Conservation Easement Program.

In this farmland preservation program, Lehigh County farmland owners who are in an agricultural security area can apply to sell their development rights to the county and the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Five Lehigh County applicants have accepted purchase offers for agricultural conservation easements from the county board. If the State Agricultural Land Preservation Board approves all five of these purchases, Lehigh County will soon have more than 650 acres of permanently preserved farmland.

Easement values are determined by appraisal. To date, appraised agricultural conservation easement values in Lehigh County have ranged from $625 pre acre to $3,400 per acre.

For more information on the program and the application process, call Jeff Zehr at (215) 391-9583 or stop by the Lehigh County Agricultural Center, Suite 105, 4184 Dorney Park Road, Allentown (South Whitehall Township).

Seedless Watermelons

Perhaps the most significant recent event in watermelon breeding is the development of seedless varieties for production. Although some people still prefer spitting out the seeds found in traditional watermelons, many others find it enjoyable to eat a watermelon without having to deal with seeds. In many cases, seedless watermelons are also sweeter than seeded watermelons.

The genetic technology to breed seedless watermelons was originally demonstrated in the early 1950s, although commercially acceptable varieties have only recently become available. Basically, unlike most organisms (including humans) which are "diploid" and have two sets of chromosomes, seedless watermelons have three. Thus, they are often referred to as "triploid" watermelons because of the three (hence "tri") chromosome sets.

Since they are sterile (seedless) and can't reproduce themselves, triploid seeds are obtained by making hybrids between diploid plants and "tetraploid" plants (i.e., those with four sets of chromosomes). This process is tedious and labor-intensive; thus the cost of triploid watermelon seed is often in the range of 25 to 30 cents per seed.

Although the chromosome imbalance in the triploid seedless plants does not seem to suppress the growth or development of the plant, it has a dramatic effect upon seed production in the fruit. The viability of both pollen grains and ovules are drastically reduced because of the abnormal chromosome movement that occurs during fruiting.

Since fruit set and fruit growth in all watermelons (both seeded and seedless) are dependent upon pollination of the female flower, viable pollen is an absolute necessity for seedless watermelon production. Diploid (seeded) watermelon plants must be planted among the triploid (seedless) plants in order that bees have a viable source of pollen for the seedless plants. Once bees carry viable pollen to the flowers of the seedless plants, fruits start forming from the base of the female flower. The ovules within these fruit are not viable, so true seeds do not form despite the presence of viable pollen.

When seedless watermelons are cut open at ripeness, small white vestigial seeds are often seen. These result from the inviable ovules and are easily chewed and swallowed as part of the flesh. Researchers have grown seedless watermelons at the University of Maryland for two years. All varieties were germinated in the greenhouse and transplanted to the field.

Poor germination has long been acknowledged as a problem with triploid watermelon seeds. Some seed companies recommend that soil or peat pots should be soaked thoroughly and drained 24 hours before planting, and that uniform high moisture and a 85 degree F. temperature should be maintained during the first 48 hours of germination. A fungicide should be used to treat seeds, and seed coats clamping around the emerging seedlings should be removed manually. Once about 10 percent of the seeds have germinated, the temperature should be lowered to 75 degrees F. Plants should be ready for transplanting to the field in three weeks and should not have more than three true leaves.

In addition to poor germination, Maryland researchers have observed some additional problems with seedless watermelons: hollow heart, poor internal color, and seediness. These defects ranged from nonexistent to severe, depending upon the variety and the season grown -- the presence of any of these defects detracted from the overall quality of the fruit.

Seedless watermelons are still considered a novelty item in many areas, and production costs are high because of their special growth requirements. However, their profit potential is also high. The next few years should determine whether a consistent and profitable market for seedless watermelons will develop, and whether this market is separate from or competitive with seeded watermelons. Meanwhile, many vegetable seed companies (both foreign and domestic) are continuing their development efforts toward new varieties of seedless watermelons.

Extra Leafy Alfalfa

- Cimarron VR -

New, improved, better. An advanced alfalfa variety built on award winning forage quality. Extra leafiness, heavy terminal buds, early spring growth, rapid recovery, and full season production.

A valuable asset to any high quality forage production program.

Cimarron Performance Update

Start your alfalfa project with Cimarron VR.
Ten acres, fifty, or a hundred -
you will want Cimarron VR at work on your acres.

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Microbes on the farm can help or hurt, depending on which kinds they are and where they end up.

Two speakers at the second in a two-part dairy days program offered by Lancaster County extension service addressed on-farm lung hazards and also the use of microbial agents to help cattle digestion and prepare better silage.

Dan McFarland, a multi-county agricultural engineer extension agent, talked about the use of lung hazards to farmers and the use of breathing masks to prevent illnesses or death that can result from breathing certain microspic forms of life.

Dr. Limin Kung, with the University of Delaware Department of Animal Science, gave two talks; on feeding certain bacteria and fungus to cows to possibly aid in digestion, and using inoculants to speed the fermentation process in making silage.

According to McFarland, two basic lung problems are identified with farming — Organic Dust Toxicity Syndrome and Farmers Lung.

Causing a flu-like illness several hours after inhalation, ODTS is probably more common than believed he said, since it is not fatal and the symptoms are so much like the flu that it can easily be misdiagnosed.

Farmer's lung can cause death and ususally affects one person.

The big difference between the two, according to McFarland is what is inhaled and how many people are affected. ODTS affects all who are exposed to such conditions.

There is also occupational asthma which occurs in about 10 percent of those working in confinement housing, McFarland said. It is characterized by immediate coughing within 2 to 3 minutes of exposure.

The cause of some of these reactions are mold and fungal spores (basically seeds), animal hair, dandruff, dried fecal matter, grain dust and bacteria in the air which range in size from half a micron to several microns.

The problems are caused by toxins, viruses, bacteria or molds which can be a part of the tiny air particles being breathed in. The particles can cause problems through a number of ways — react on their own, take hold and grow inside the human repiratory tract, or stimulate the body to react in defense — all of which cause symptoms.

McFarland used a PSU extension fact sheet authored by Dennis Murphy, a professor of agricultural engineering.

According to the handout, "Farmer's Lung and Toxic Organic Dust Syndrome (TODS) are names give to two farm occupational diseases caused by inhaling airborne mold spores. Silo Unloaders Syundrom is another name for TODS because the condition often occurs during the unloading or uncapping of silos. Similar diseases associated with other agricultural occupations have been termed Bird Fanciers' Lung, Mushroom Workers' Lung, Wood Pulp Workers' Disease, etc.

"Mold spores are produced by microoranisms which grow in baled hay, stored grain, or silage with a high moisture content (30 percent). They become active when temperatures reach 70 degrees in poorly ventilated areas.

"Farmers most often suffer from these diseases in winter and early spring because the molds have had time to develop in closed storage areas.

"Heavy concentrations of mold spores appear as a dry, white or grey powder in grain or forage. When the feed is moved, billions of these microscopic-sized particles become airborne and attach themselves to dust. These particles pass through the body's natural filtering mechanisms and accumulate in the lungs where they can cause an allergic type of pneumonia. Repeated attacks can lead to scarring of lung tissue which impairs its function. Such tissue damage is permanent."

During the talk, McFarland showed a gas mask performance tester that was built by the college agriculture engineer department and was first displayed during Ag Progress Days at Rock Spring.

The tester consists of a series of mannequin heads hooked up to vacuum tubes. Each mannequin head is outfitted with a different form of respirator.

An air analyzer and valves completes the ability of McFarland to test the amount of dust particles in the air and also to comparitively show the effectiveness of the variety of respirators available.

The most reliable respirator for dust control is the powered air helmet. It consists of a helmet, two filters and an electric fan within the helmet. It has the ability to remove more than 99 percent of the dust in an area. This type of respirator, depending on model and manufacturer, ranges in price from less than $300 to more than $800, and in dust removability from 80 percent to more than 99 percent.

About half as effective is the chemical cartridge respirator, not the type used for spraying pesticides, but somewhat similar in appearance. It can handle up to about 60 percent of the dust particles.

The simple masks, called toxic dust masks, remove about 6 to 8 percent of the dust in a room. It is darker in color than a similar looking, simple-construction mask, called a nuisance dust mask.

The nuisance dust mask does not offer any protection against breathing mold spores or toxic dust.

Dan McFarland, multi-county agriculture engineer extension agent, shows a number of different respirators and discusses their abilities to protect farmers' lungs.

LEADERSHIP AT WORK®

Farm Experts: Focus On the Future

WAYNESBURG (Greene County) — Two farm management and economics experts told farmers to focus on the future instead of dwelling on the present, during a workshop held in Waynesburg that was designed to address credit management during the 1990s.

Co-sponsored by Penn State Cooperative Extension and PennWest Farm Credit, featured speakers were Dr. Dave Kohl, professor of agricultural economics at Virginia Tech University and Bill Waters, area farm management extension agent.

Kohl presented an acronym "SWOT," which stands for a method for analyzing the agriculture industry. "SWOT" stands for Strengths, Weaknesses, Opportunities and Threats.

• Strengths — Currently farms have a lower debt outstanding than was seen during the 1970s and 80s. Recent figures indicate that for every dollar of net farm income, there was only $3 of debt. During the farm crisis, the ratio was closer to $12 of debt for every dollar of net income. Variable production costs have decreased almost 15 percent during the past decade.

Farmers are slowly weaning themselves from government programs (only $1 out of every $5 is from government payouts). New export markets are opening due to the declining value of the dollar.

• Weaknesses — Some farmers are still too dependent on government programs. The energy situation and the Mid-East Crisis are cuase for concern. The General Agreement on Trade and Tariffs (GATT) negotiations could create problems as well.

• Opportunities — New biotechnology and biosciences are expected to open many doors to increased productivity. The fields are not limited to BST and drugs. They key is to learn how to use the technology and gain consumer acceptance of the practices. Value-added products provide several opportunities as well.

• Threats — Water problems and concerns will remain a threat in many areas. Most farmers will have to deal with volatile, or rapidly changing incomes in the next decades. Many dairy farmers could probably learn a lot from the better livestock producers, as they have dealth with that problems all along.

Other statistics and information provided by Kohl and Waters gave some guidelines for farmers to consider:

Of the $1.3 trillion national budget, .8 percent is spent on farm programs.

Personal budgets should include at least six months' of family living expenses in cash or cash equivalents. The average American only has 44 days' worth of cash available.

Livestock producers should have a goal of being at least 10 percent above average in production for the breed, county and state.

Crop farmers should be at or near the capability listed for each soil productivity group on the farm. Comparisons can be made by consulting the Penn State Agronomy Guide.

A financial analysis should be performed to calculate exactly where an operation stands financially. This requires a balance sheet, income statement, statement of cash flows and reconciliation of owner's equity.

Non-farm revenue is important to the farm operation at three oasic times — during the start-up phase; during a crisis or farm expansion; and when phasing out.

It is helpful is the consulting farm accountant has a farm backround.

About 25 percent of the farm's margin should be invested outside of agriculture to prepare for retirement. Use tax-deferred investments, if possible.

To calculate the farm's margin, a formula has been provided:

Net Farm Income
+Non-farm Income
+Depreciation and Interest

=Earnings available
-Family Living and income taxes

=Capacity for interest, principal payments and new investments
-Current interest and principal payments and current capital leases

=Margin

Kohl compared a credit risk with a traffic light. In the case of a green light, there is little risk involved. The later one travels through the yellow light, the greater the risk. Traveling through a red light provides the most risk.

In a national study, credit risk comparisons showed that green light farmers made their payments on time, yellow light farmers made their payments from 30 to 90 days late, and red light farmers were in litigation.

The farm's debt to asset ratio whould be less than .4 To calculate the ration, divide the total debt by total assets.

The use of personal credit cards to finance business operations is highly frowned upon.

Unseen Farm Life

And while these lung hazards on the farm are associated with microbes, other microbes are apparently very beneficial when directly fed to cattle or when used in the preparation of cattle feeds.

According to Kung, limited research is available on the effects of directly feeding microbes to lactating dairy cattle. The majority of studies have been done on beef cattle.

The talk was listed as "Feeding Probiotics," but Kung said that the name "probiotics" is obsolete and a misnomer. It was coined in the 1970s and was formed from the prefix "pro-," for being in favor of, and from the suffix "-biotic," for life.

The proper name now is "Direct Fed Microbials," or DFMs. It includes bacteria and fungus.

He explained that in the normal state of the digestive tract of the ruminant, there is a balance between beneficial and detrimental microbes. Stress results in an imbalance of the microbes and favors the growth of detrimental microbes within the animal.

The concept behind directly feeding microbes is to supplement the population of beneficial microbes within the animal to help restore a healthy balance and thus result in less illness and poor production by cattle.

Lactobacillus acidophilus is the most common food additive and although the exact level of feeding has yet to be determined, the price for feeding is about 3 cents per to 7 cents per head per day.

Limited research indicates increase of three to four pounds of milk per day.

Feeding of yeast, a fungus, and/or fungal extracts may be of benefit, but research can not prove exactly why. According to Kung, the yeast appears to be more beneficial than the extracts.

According to Kung, the yeast may either benefit the bacteria in the rumen, or may directly aid in breaking down the feed material. It is theorized that the yeast aids in buffering and thereby also aids in digestion. But there is no evidence yet that there is any aid in lower gut digestion.

However, several studies support increased milk yields from the use of yeast.

The cost of feeding yeast is about 3 cents to 7 cents per day per head.

Kung said that his conclusions about feeding DFM are that research is not always positive; there is limited direct evidence of cause and effect; and more research is needed to verify efficacy.

Kung later talked about the use of bacterial innoculants in making corn silage and haylage.

He said that the key to making a top silage is to drop the acidity of the forage down below a 4.5 pH as quickly as possible. This preserves more of the nutrients.

The bacteria types added are also Lactobacillus, just as those fed directly, but the bacteria used to innoculate forage for silage are Lactobacillus plantarum and acidilactici, along with several others not Lactobacillus.

The main reason for using inoculants is to lower the pH and better preserve the feed.

Kung suggested applying innoculants at the blower and at a minimum rate of 100,000 organisms per gram of forage.

However, Kung said the economics benefits of adding an inoculant to corn may be of neglible benefit, since corn silage achieves a low pH rapidly. Haylage on the other hand would probably benefit from the procedure and result in less wasted forage and reduced risk of mold growth.

However, corn silage will still benefit somewhat from having its pH dropped faster.

Another catagory of inoculant is extracted enzymes which are designed ttThe use of enzymes as a silage additive to break down the cellulose in the plant cell walls, seems to aid in feed intake, but research has not shown a corresponding milk increase. Therefore Kung said, it may not be worth the cost of using enzymes since they don't indicate a profitable situation.

A series to update hog producers on the Pennsylvania Pseudorabies Eradication Program.

Second of a series

Editor's note: Last week, Lancaster Farming introduced the ways pseudorabies, a disease affecting swine, is spread and the importance of eradication. This week, more detail on how to control the disease is provided.

PRV CONTROL PLANS

Dr. Robert Graybill
Veterinary Practitioner

Recent changes in the use of gene-deleted vaccines approved for use in the swine herds in the Lancaster County area will have a definite impact on the spread and control of the pseudorabies virus (PRV).

Currently, after testing a statistical sample of a herd, vaccination of a negative PRV herd can be utilized to prevent the introduction and spread of PRV into a herd. This will not result in a quarantine of the vaccinated herd or restrict the sale or intrastate movement of feeder pigs.

Therefore, it is strongly recommended that herds in an endemic PRV area be vaccinated in order to provide maximum protection from clinical infection and spread of PRV.

With the current tests available for PRV, it is now possible to determine the field strain of PRV infection rate within a herd and use these results to establish a protocol to remove a previously infected herd from quarantine. This will require frequent vaccination of the whole herd and complete control of pig flow to accomplish the eradication of PRV.

New additions, except interstate animals, will need to be vaccinated upon arrival and held in isolation for 2 to 3 weeks until the second dose of vaccine can be administered. After adding these animals to the herd, they should be tested after 60 days to establish the complete control of the spread of field virus within the herd.

If the herd infection rate is greater than 50 percent, then vaccination of incoming animals and turning over the herd with new negative vaccinated animals may be necessary to facilitate whole herd cleanup. If less than 50 percent of the herd is infected, then test and remove may be the best option.

Whole herd vaccination would be required in both of the above methods. Other diseases that may be in the PRV positive herd must be considered before making a decision to attempt PRV cleanup while maintaining the existing herd.

If the swine operation is a farrow-to-finish facility, then vaccination of feeder pigs leaving the all-in/all-out nursery will be necessary. To remove the herd from quarantine, the quickest method would be to purchase all replacements as needed to replace the positive animals as they are sold.

Consult your veterinarian to establish a herd protocol adapted to your facility and particular situation. Herd biosecurity becomes an important aspect with precise vaccination schedules and strict control of pig movement. With area vaccination of PRV, we should be able to decrease the shedding of PRV and eventually eliminate the disease from our herds in Pennsylvania.

State Grange Plans Legislative Trip

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — More than 40 members of the Pennsylvania State Grange will visit Washington, D.C., March 18 and 19, to discuss farm issues with their congressmen.

The Pennsylvania State Grange plans this legislative trip annually as a way for members to meet with their representatives and senators on a one-to-one basis and express their concerns over legislation.

The trip will include a meeting with the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) and promoting issues such as the care and maintenance of rural roads and bridges, according to Brenda Shambaugh, legislative director for the Pennsylvania State Grange.

"For the past year, the National Grange has been working on projects to improve rural roads and bridges and we on the state level have been supportive of this," Shambaugh said. "When you consider that 82 percent of the nation's roads are in rural communities and only 4 percent of the county-maintained roads are paved, the need becomes apparent.

"We will be expressing our concerns relative to the removal of the Highway Trust Fund from the Unified Budget and the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings cutback," Shambaugh said. "We will also be speaking with Rep. George Gekas relative to his proposal to release Highway Trust Fund monies immediately."

Dairy supply and management will also be a concern for the members traveling to the nation's capital, according to Shambaugh. The Grange believes any milk supply management program should be voluntary and should meet the needs of both fluid and manufactured markets. Some specifics which the Grange believes should be a part of a supply management program are the establishment of a target price for base milk at $14 per cost on the farm, establishment of a trigger mechanism based on supply and demand factors to begin and terminate any deficiency payment program, and provision that farmers who sign contracts with the USDA agree to reduce their annual production to a percentage of their base production.

The Grange is also calling for a suspension of regulations concerning wetlands on privately-owned, agricultural land.

"Current regulations say that land not traditionally used for agriculture in the past five years cannot be drained," Shambaugh said. "And in certain cases, such as perennial harvesting on orchards, farmers would need to obtain permits to continue farming."

Other concerns will be the need to promoting alternative fuels to replace imported oil and obtaining sufficient funding of the Rural Electric Association so adequate electric service will be available to rural areas.

Grange members will assure congressmen that they know and support the need for reducing government spending. However, the Pennsylvania State Grange is alarmed about the percentage of reductions and the costs attributed to the agricultural budget.

NPPC To File For Extraordinary Challenge

DES MOINES, Iowa — The National Pork Producers Council (NPPC) is calling for the U.S. trade representative to take the unprecedented step of using the extraordinary challenge procedure under the U.S./Canada Free Trade Agreement (FTA).

Pork producers will file for the extraordinary challenge to correct the actions of a binational panel that forced the International Trade Commission (ITC) to reverse its opinion on the countervailing duty on subsidized Canadian pork products.

"Extreme injustice requires a strong remedy," said NPPC President Mike Wehler. "By forming an extraordinary challenge committee, the United States can begin to correct the error of a binational panel that has ignored U.S. law as well as the rules of the U.S./Canada Free Trade Agreement."

A binational panel, established under the FTA, compelled the ITC to reversse its two preceding opinions that Canadian pork subsidies create a threat of injury to the U.S. pork industry. The panel incorrectly limited the facts that the ITC could use to make its decision, which forced the ITC's negative ruling.

ITC Commissioners David Rohr and Don Newquist expressed their concern with the panel's strict limitations when the ITC announced its negative opinion on February 12. "It is now clear from this second panel decision that the panel wanted the Commission to reach a preordained outcome by considering only those facts... that will support a negative determination," Rohr and Newquist said. "We believe that these restrictions are contrary to the facts and the law, but because they are imposed by the panel, they are legally binding on us."

The extraordinary challenge process was created under the FTA for use on cases when a panel departs from a fundamental rule of procedure or exceeds its authority. An extraordinary challenge committee would be formed within 15 days following the U.S. Trade Representative's acceptance of NPPC's request. The committee then has 30 days to announce its decision. It could overturn the panel's ruling, or make the panel correct its errors and allow the ITC to look at the case again.

The countervailing duty on subsidized Canadian fresh, chilled, and frozen pork products was put in place in September 1989. Along with calling for a binational panel on the ITC decision, Canadian groups appealed to another binational panel on the U.S. Department of Commerce's ruling on the case. This panel that reviews the issue of whether Canadian subsidies are countervailable is expected to announce its decision on March 7.

"It is critical that these binational panels follow the Free Trade Agreement and the law," said NPPC's Wehler. "U.S. agriculture needs to have the Free Trade Agreement review process more clearly defined, especially as the United States considers a further trading alliance with Mexico and Canada. If this panel decision is allowed to stand, U.S. pork producers will be put at a competitive disadvantage to Canadian producers."

Grange Backs N.Y. Budget

CORTLAND, N.Y. — The proposed $51.9 billion state budget, complete with some $965 million in spending cuts, has received backing from the New York State Grange.

"We're supporting what's going on because the cuts seem to be across the board. There's some equity involved," said Grange Master William Benson, fresh from meetings with state Agriculture and Markets Commissioner Richard McGuire and key Cuomo administration staffers.

The Grange has long pressed for budgetary belt-tightening and has complained steadily about runaway program spending. Now, Benson said, Cuomo is on the right track.

In Albany, Benson said he and other Grange leaders were most impressed with the developments at Agriculture and Markets, where cuts have cost 40 jobs and where tough program decisions were made only after considerable study. "These people did some work," Benson said. "They decided what was getting the bang for the buck and they made their decisions based on that. It wasn't a mindless, across-the-board cut."

Benson said that staff cuts in that department were not restricted to low-level employees. "Some high level positions have been eliminated, too, and that's the kind of thing that needs to happen," he said.

Meanwhile, the Grange has found itself astride a fence regarding Cuomo's proposed 10-cent gas tax increase and his plan to put the revenues into a dedicated highway fund.

The Grange has traditionally opposed tax increases but has also lobbied extensively for the creation of the highway fund. Now, it probably won't get one without the other.

"We're not crazy about a gas tax hike, but whether we support it depends on how the fund would be administered," Benson said. "If rural residents get back out what they put in — and that's what we've been assured will happen — then fine. We just wouldn't want to see a gas tax pumping funds back into a place were there aren't any cars."

ASH FROM INCINERATED BROILER LITTER AS A SOURCE OF PHOSPHORUS IN CHICK DIETS

H. S. Siegel
Professor and Head
Dept. of Poultry Science

The most common use for broiler and turkey litter has been fertilizer. However, the concentration of animals per tillable acre in some areas of the state has increased to the point where excessive applications of manure, which contain high levels of nitrogen and phosphorus, may be becoming detrimental to water supplies and create environmental problems in surface water runoff.

Therefore, alternatives to the application of manures to adjacent land are being evaluated. Under the direction of F. V. Muir, research at Penn State has examined the incineration of poultry litter and its use as an energy source for heating broiler houses.

The burning of litter results in an ash residue that is high in calcium, phosphorus, and potassium. Because phosphorus is the third most expensive nutrient in poultry diets, if the litter ash could be used as an acceptable phosphorus ingredient, this would enhance the feasibility of burning broiler litter as an energy source.

Preliminary chemical analysis of broiler litter ash showed the major mineral components to be calcium, 15.4 percent; phosphorus, 9.40 percent; and potassium, 7.12 percent.

However, all phosphorus sources are not equally available to chickens. Therefore, it was necessary to compare the "bioavailability" of the phosphorus from the litter ash with a standard source such as DiCal.

The results from two experiments, using growth rate to 3 weeks of age and tibia (leg bone) ash as criteria, demonstrated that broiler litter ash could be used as a phosphorus ingredient for poultry.

The availability of the litter ash phosphorus ranged from 78 to 83 percent of that from DiCal. A nutritionist would take these figures into consideration when formulating a balanced ration.

Tennessee Walking Horse At Clinic

DENVER (Lancaster Co.) — For the second year in a row, "Equus" magazine reports that the Tennessee Walking Horse is the one breed whose breed registry is growing. All other major breeds are in decline.

More and more people are discovering the easy gaits and gentle disposition of the Tennessee Walking Horse and welcome the opportunity to learn more about this fantastic horse.

The Pennsylvania Pleasure Walking Horse Association will offer several days of comradery and educational experience for old hands as well as newcomers to the breed at a horse clinic here.

The instructor this year is Sherri Szues from Bellevue, Ohio. The clinic will be held at J.A.M. Stables, On April 13 and 14.

Szues is much in demand as a clinician and has had a very successful show career. Among the horses she has trained are Genus Boy Pride, the 1988 3-year-old world champion and the 1989 4-year-old world champion. She also rode Praise Hallelujah to the 1990 Division B 2-year-old world championship.

The clinic is open to both experienced and beginning riders, whether interested in showing or pleasure riding. The clinic will center on improving gaits by bitting, shoeing, and horsemanship. Time will also be spent learning how to start the young colt. A session will also be spent on what the judge looks for in placing the plantation show horse.

Those who want to bring a horse for evaluation and help will need to register early. Individual attention will be given to each horse and rider. The problem, along with corrective measures, will be interpreted to the spectators.

U.S. Has Record Tobacco Export

PRINCETON, N.J.— "The United States tobacco industry closed the 1990 calendar year with a record trade surplus of $5.66 billion, an increase of $1.44 billion or 34.2% over the previous record of over $4.22 billion set in 1989," said Dr. Thomas C. Slane, vice president of the Tobacco Merchants Association of the U.S., Inc. (TMA).

The industry's year-end positive trade balance accounted for 35% of the nation's overall agricultural trade surplus (exports minus the customs value of imports for consumption) of $16.6 billion in 1990.

"The category of tobacco and tobacco products was the second largest contributor to the nation's agricultural trade surplus," according to Slane. "The grains and feed category was the leading contributor to the nation's agricultural trade balance, followed by tobacco and tobacco products, oilseed and oilseed products, cotton, and then animals and animal products."

The 1990 year-end tobacco surplus was led by exports of tobacco products valued at a record high of almost $5.04 billion. "In 1990, U.S. cigarette manufactuers shipped an all-time record of 164.3 billion cigarettes, valued at $4.76 billion, up $1.39 billion or 41.3% over 1989," Slane said. "This helped propel the year-end tobacco products balance up nearly $1.36 billion or 38.1 percent over 1989's figure of almost $3.6 billion."

Exports to the U.S.S.R. increased 82.7 times over 1989 and for the first time brought the Soviet Union into the top 10 countries of destination for U.S. tobacco products, along with Belgium, Japan, Hong Kong, United Arab Emirates, Saudi Arabia, Singapore, Taiwan, South Korea, and Turkey.

"These ten destinations, none of which are classified as developing or less-developed countries, accounted for 89.8% of all cigarette export shipments this year," said Slane.

At $743.7 million, the balance of trade in leaf tobacco was up 13.2% for 1990, as increased leaf exports outweighed increased leaf imports. "Leaf exports of $1.44 billion were up 10.7% over 1989, while at $696 million, leaf imports increased a lesser 8.1% over 1989," said Slane.

Keystone Promotes Wismer

SILVERDALE (Bucks Co.)— Glenn A. Wismer, a native of Bedminster Township, Bucks County, was recently promoted to Senior Loan Officer at Keystone Farm Credit, ACA. Dean L. Shollenberger, Silverdale branch manager, made the announcement.

A graduate of Central Bucks High School, Wismer earned a B.S. in 1976 from Delaware Valley College of Science and Agriculture, his major emphasis of study being food industry. He worked as a sales representative in food processing, sanitation, and supplies for BASF Wyandotte for several years prior to joining Farm Credit as a field representative in 1980. He was promoted to loan officer in 1982.

Wismer and his wife, Glenda, reside on the Wismer family farm in Bedminster Township where they farm part-time, raising beef cattle and growing soybeans, corn, and hay. Wismer is the treasurer of the Bucks-Montgomery Council of the Pennsylvania Council of Cooperatives (formerly PAFC); president of the Bucks Co. 4-H Development Fund board; and a member of the Bucks County Cooperative Extension Executive Committee.

Rickey Attains V.P. Position At J I Case

RACINE, Wis.— "I'm very determined, dedicated, and downright fortunate to be in the right place at the right time," said Vickie Rickey when she describes how she attained her position as vice president of worldwide marketing for J I Case's Agricultural Equipment Group.

Rickey is one of a number of female employees who are moving into the management and executive ranks in non-traditional jobs.

"Talent does not discriminate by gender," said James L. Ketelsen, chairman and chief executive officer of J I Case's parent company, Tenneco Inc. "Clearly, any company that excludes women from opportunities in its management and executive ransk is shooting itself in the foot.

"Demographic studies indicate that two-thirds of the entrants into the workforce between now and the year 2000 will be women," he said, "so I believe it's imperative that companies recognize this source of aptitude, ability, and competence. Any company that continues to depend on white males as its primary source of management-track employees is going to have a very limited field to choose from in the future."

Since joining Case as part of the graduate development program 16 years ago, Rickey has worked in a variety of areas, including parts, marketing services, and corporate planning. She was promoted to vice president of corporate planning and product development in 1987 and to her present position in 1988.

Today, Rickey and the 315 people under her direction are responsible for product development, technical publications, warranty administration, pricing, training, and agricultural product advertising and public relations.

"The agricultural equipment business is very cyclical, which makes my job even more challenging," Rickey said. "You can't be a one-dimensional manager. You have to be able to manage growth as well as decline. I also enjoy the opportunity of taking a diverse group of people and helping them function as a team that performs high-quality work."

To other women who wish to move up in business, Rickey said, "Don't be so concerned with moving up rapidly in the early years of your career. Instead, be selective about your assignments and gain a broad range of experience so you can achieve what you want to later."

Vickie Rickey, vice president of worldwide marketing, Agricultural Equipment Group at J I Case.

For its innovative programs and policies designed to bring women such as Rickey into the management and executive ranks, Tenneco has been named one of three winners of the 1991 Catalyst Award. The other winners are SC Johnson Wax and Arthur Andersen & Co., S.C. The award is presented to organizations that demonstrate a commitment to leadership development for their female employees.

"Tenneco, SC Johnson Wax, and Arthur Andersen have recognized, well before significant numbers of women are positioned for senior management, that they must fill their pipelines with talented women at every management level," said Felice Schwartz, president of Catalyst, a not-for-profit organization that works with business to effect change for women. "The steps they have taken to develop and integrate women are substantive, comprehensive, and vigorously supported by their senior executives."

At Tenneco, these programs include an "Executive Incentive Compensation Program" that links a significant portion of each executive's bonus to the attainment of goals to promote women and minorities, as well as an "Executive Resource Review," which directly involves the CEO in the review and succession-planning process for the top positions in the organization.

In addition, Tenneco's Women's Advisory Council has been instrumental in developing the company's Work/Family Support Program, which includes family-friendly benefits that help prevent employees from being forced to choose between family obligations and career opportunities. The Council also organized Tenneco's "Horizons in Leadership" conference, where 170 of the company's top women addressed workplace and advancement issues.

Seedway Produces Sorghum-Soybean Forage Mix

YORK (York Co.) — Seedway Inc., a complete seed and service company located here, recently announced the introduction of Double SS Sweet (TM), a sorghum-soybean forage mixture.

The introduction was made in response to grower needs for increased forage quality from a high ing annual crop. T company will continue to market its standard Double SS Brand sorghum-soybean mixture, which has been field proven under Northeast conditions.

Double SS Sweet contains a sterile sweet sorghum as the sorghum component of the mixture. Higher sugar levels are expected to increase palatability and forage digestability.

Double SS Sweet is the third Seedway forage mixture product in a series which features on-farm protein production, less herbicide use, and rapid manure utilization. Double SS, the standard sorghum-soybean mixture mentioned earlier, and Pea-Kal are the predecessors in the series.

Forage growers interested in Double SS, Double SS Sweet, or Pea-Kal can obtain free literature by calling (800) 836-3720.

Dairy Of Distinction Seeks Well-Kept Dairy Farms For 1991 Beautification Recognition Program

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

COVINGTON (Tioga Co.)—The Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program, Inc., is ready to receive applications for 1991. This program rewards clean, well-kept farmsteads to help with consumer acceptance of dairy products in the store.

State President Dan Baker, dairyman from Covington, Tioga County, said the program has received great acceptance in the past and officers look forward to a good response again this year. "There are plenty of good looking dairy farms out there that have not been judged," Baker said. "And even those who have entered the selection process in past years, should enter again."

The program provides rewards of recognition to producers who maintain attractive production sites. This recognition benefits the entire dairy industry, as well as individual dairymen. Not only does the favorable publicity generated by the program in the general press help bring modern farm practices to the attention of urban people, farmers use the distinction to promote their own operation or seek and hire farm labor.

Paul Nichols, the secretary for the Pennsylvania program, said applications may be sent in now to apply for the award. Deadline for applications is April 15, 1991. Judging takes place in the month of May and is based on the roadside appearance of buildings, grounds and surroundings. The states are divided into districts and a local committee oversees the program in each district. A team of judges designated by the local committee visits each farm and uses a score sheet to rate each farm. In Pennsylvania, in addition to this team of judges, the sanitarian for the farm's cooperative or dealer-handler is asked to be part of the judging process.

"One of the things I always tell people is that even though they may not now have the most fancy place, they can work toward the principles of the Dairy of Distinction program," Nichols said. "By doing this, they work toward a goal that encourages consumers to use more dairy products."

Winners receive a colorful, 18x24-inch Dairy of Distinction sign to be placed at the entrance to the farmstead. In addition, as in past years, an 11x14-inch color portrait of the farm will be given by Lancaster Farming to each winning farm in the Pennsylvania program.

"As a dairy farmer, you work hard all year long, taking care of your farm," said Helen Fountain, program executive secretary. "In addition to managing your herd, there are lawns to mow, flowers to plant, and overall maintenance to keep farm buildings looking great. You deserve to be recognized for all the hard work, dedication and pride you put into your farmstead.

"It's time to apply for you and your farm to receive the coveted honor of Dairy of Distinction. This award is based on the concept that attractive farms enhance consumer confidence in the wholesomeness of milk, thereby stimulating milk sales and encouraging public support for the dairy industry."

Active dairy farms in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania are eligible to apply for the award. Criteria for Dairy of Distinction awards include: clean and attractively finished buildings; neat landscaping, ditches, roads and lands; and well-maintained fences. Cleanliness of animals, barnyard, feed areas, as well as manure management, are also taken into consideration.

Applications are available from each state's program secretary or local cooperative extension. In New York, contact Evelyn Lightfoote, 3053 Depew Road, Stanley, N.Y. 14561. Phone: (716) 526-6654. In New Jersey, contact Angust Knispel, RD 1, Box 325, Pittstown, NJ 08867. Phone: 201) 735-4989. In Pennsylvania, contact Paul Nichols, American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, 1853 East Third St. Williamsport, PA 17701. Phone: (717) 323-2552.

Singing Brook Farms in Bedford County and owned by the Obie Snider family at Imler is an example of the farms that were designated Dairy of Distinction last year. Over the last four year, 363 farms in Pennsylvania have received the recognition.

Food Marketing Conference Set

By Robert E. Leiby And
David L. Dunbar
Lehigh Co. Cooperative
Extension Office

When a manager puts a new food product on the market, the capital, time and talent that went into that product is risked, as if on a tightrope. The evolving food marketplace of the 1990s makes that tightrope even harder to walk.

"Introducing New Products in Today's Market" is the theme for a one-day conference to help area food processors, companies, and farm entrepreneurs manage the risk in the food trade. The event takes place on Thursday, March 28 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Agricultural Hall at the Allentown Fairgrounds.

The conference is concurrent with the Lehigh Valley Hotel and Restaurant Show at the same site on Wednesday and Thursday, March 27 and 28. Conference attendees will have free access to this popular trade show.

The Lehigh Valley Chapter of the American Marketing Association along with the Lehigh County Cooperative Extension Office are the conference organizers.

The agenda for this meeting features speakers with career-length experience in the food industry and consultants who monitor the American consumer. Two panel presentations will give attendees six leads to nearby resources on food marketing and, later, three personal stories of food product successes.

Conference attenders will hear from food and consumer experts, including:

• James Wagner, editor-in-chief of "Food Engineering International" magazine, speaking about how global trade and technology are making the marketplace distinctly different.

• Joseph MacNeil, professor of food science, Penn State, addressing the management of food product introduction and testing consumer taste preferences.

• Linda Gilbert, president of HealthFocus, Inc., sharing the latest findings on consumers' wishes and food buying behaviors regarding health and well-being.

• Mona Doyle, president of Consumer Network, Inc., describing how a slow economy and uncertain forecasts affect the ways consumers think about and purchase foods.

• Aaron Brody, vice president of Schotland Business Research and professor at St. Josephs University, on the functional roles and latest trends in packaging.

Near the end of the program is a networking session where attenders will meet counterparts and exchange ideas and samples. When the program ends in the late afternoon, there will be several hours for attenders to tour the adjacent food trade show.

Cost for the conference is $30 for the first attender of the business or farm, which includes a luncheon and a food marketing information packet. Additional representatives from the same firm attend at a reduced rate of $20. Also, half-day attenders pay $20 (includes lunch and packet). The conference flyer and registration form is available from the Lehigh County Cooperative Extension Office at (215) 391-9840.

Lehigh Valley Horse Council

Mark Gross of Hidden Springs Farm, Kintnersville, will discuss competitive trail riding at the next public meeting of the Lehigh Valley Horse Council, 7:30 p.m., Monday, March 25, Community Room, Whitehall Mall, Whitehall (Allentown). The community room is upstairs, opposite the Plaza Theater.

Safe Handling Of Pesticides

Agricultural chemicals have helped provide an abundance of high quality but relatively low-cost food products. But they must be applied with informed care and concern for the safety of users and consumers, and to protect the environment.

• Without fail, read and heed label directions to assure proper and safe use and storage. Make certain all your workers understand and follow label directions.

• Don't risk your health. Always use appropriate protective equipment as required by the label.

• Mix pesticides carefully and accurately, using only the recommended amount. Wear gloves, splash-proof goggles or face shield, a rubber or neoprene apron, and other required personal protective clothing.

• Install an approved anti-siphoning device to prevent back siphoning into your water supply. An air gap between the source and the spray tank should be maintained.

• Whenever you transport, store, mix, load, or apply pesticides, keep all unauthorized persons away, especially children.

• Triple rinse all empty containers. Put the rinse into the tank for use on a labeled crop.

• Clean up all spills and leaks immediately. Keep cleanup supplies such as a containment drum, kitty litter, a shovel, a broom and dustpan in your storage facility and ready to use.

• Set application equipment for correct delivery rate and operate at the recommended speed for proper coverage. Don't apply on windy days or when heavy rain is expected.

• Post treated areas and also verbally warn others to stay out until safe to re-enter.

• Clean all equipment and protective garb when finished. Don't eat or smoke until you've washed and changed.

• Safely dispose of empty containers and excess chemicals as suggested by the manufacturer, dealer, or agricultural authority. Never dump where they could pollute groundwater, wells or streams, or be a hazard to people and animals.

• Know the signs and symptoms of pesticide poisoning for all materials you use. Make sure your employees and family members know how to recognize signs of overexposure.

• Post the telephone number of the Poison Control Center, your doctor, and the nearest hospital. When you call, have the label handy. If you go to the doctor or hospital for a poisoning emergency, take an original container or label with you.

Dr. Richard D. Ilnicki, left, receives the Pesticide Association of New Jersey's Distinguished Service Award from Dr. Gerald Ghidiu, association president-elect. Ilnicki was recognized for his outstanding activities in pesticide education.

Wet brewers grain is more than a good feed. It's a good business ingredient.

Each day, up to 100,000 U.S. dairy cows feed on rations containing wet brewers grain. That's because their owners know it minimizes feed costs while it maximizes production.

Wet brewers grain is a high-protein feed ingredient. It's always fresh, because it's delivered directly to your dairy. It fits into most programs, is easy to handle, and easy to store.

Pillsbury

Call us today. One of our professional feed consultants will help you work wet brewers grain into your ration, so you can make it a profitable ingredient for your business.

QUALITY TRAILERS FOR THE SERIOUS HAULER

• LIGHTWEIGHT- Eby stock trailers are 25-35% lighter than comparable steel trailers Less weight means better fuel mileage or increased payload.

• MAINTENANCE- Eby aluminum trailers won't rust. Welding and painting can cost you dollars in down time and repairs.

• DURABILITY- Eby trailers are built tough. Quality components and 6061 alloy aluminum provide the ruggedness required in a livestock trailer america's best built...

In 1916 Henry Krause built his first one-way plow in a small farm shop in Western Kansas. His neighbors saw the plow, were impressed with its value as a specialized tool for their farming conditions, and asked Henry to build more.

From that humble beginning in a small farm shop in Meade County, Kansas, the Krause Plow Corporation has grown into one of the world's top manufacturers of tillage equipment. In 1988, Fortune Magazine recognized Krause as "AMERICA'S BEST" tillage equipment manufacturer in an article devoted to the "100 Products That America Makes Best."

At C.B. Hoober & Son, Inc. we're priviledged to sell "America's Best Built" tillage equipment here in the East.

All-American Dairy Show Set For September

ITHACA, N.Y.— Buying used farm equipment can save money and result in a dependable long-lasting line of machinery for any operator.

"Used Farm Equipment: Assessing Quality, Safety, and Economics" (NRAES-25) teaches the potential purchaser how to inspect the machinery for the reliability of its components and the quality of its safety features, and how to estimate the economic soundness of the proposed acquisition.

This manual, written by a cooperative extension agricultural engineer, a farm safety specialist, and an area farm management agent, offers guidelines to evaluate the machinery's mechanical condition by looking for clues to past complications, upkeep, and operation. Several farm safety tips are highlighted in the booklet, which contains more than 80 detailed illustrations.

Before looking at any machinery, buyers must consider their specific needs in terms of the equipment's affordability, dependability, and compatibility. Used equipment can be purchased from dealers, friends or neighbors, or at farm auctions, dispersal sales, or commercial auctions. But it is the responsibility of the buyer to judge the overall quality of the item for sale.

A quick visual inspection is an essential factor in detecting cover-ups -- it is an important step in looking for clues to possible problems with the equipment. "Used Farm Equipment" provides instructions on how to check for signs of improper repair jobs or machine maintenance. Included in the booklet are detailed sections on assessing the condition of welds, lubricants, hydraulic systems, and power transmission components, including chains and sprockets, gearboxes and chain-cases, sheaves and belts, augers, and belt drives.

Tractors receive special consideration in this informative publication. Tractor design and safety, coolant systems, brakes and clutches, power steering, power take-off (PTO) guards, roll-over protective structures (ROPS), and other engine specifications are carefully described so buyers can choose the used tractor that is best for their operations and safest for the users of the vehicle.

Starter Fertilizer Meets Efficiency Demands

MUNDELEIN, Ill.— Higher corn yields are no accident. They come from strategic fertility programs based on thorough soil testing and efficient fertilizer placement.

Supported by university performance results, starter fertilizers have taken a lead position in placement techniques across the Midwest in conservation and reduced tillage operations, said Dr. Sam Kincheloe, director of agronomic services with IMC Fertilizer, Inc.

"The trend has been toward earlier spring planting," he said. "Even in so-called normal years, seed corn is usually placed in cold, wet ground and although soils warm up rapidly and dry, starter fertilizer can increase yields and should be investigated as a primary placement technique for the progressive farming operation as part of the total fertilization program."

The bottom line is yield and profit when scrutinizing placement techniques. In a recent study completed by Kansas State University, the success of banding potassium in a starter fertilizer treatment, in combination with nitrogen, boosted yields as high at 18 bushels per acre during a cold, wet planting season.

Starter K -- Yield Benefit Trial

Nitrogen lb/A	No K_2O bu/A	20 lb/A banded K_2O bu/A	Starter Advantage bu/A
0	72	80	8
75	128	137	9
150	167	182	15
225	166	182	16
300	167	185	18

Soil K - very high

Kansas State University

As noted in the table, the benefits from banded potassium was greatest at the higher yield levels made possible by increasing nitrogen rates.

Kincheloe said starter fertilizer also enhances rapid, early growth and tasseling of the corn crop.

In a Nebraska study, starter treatments of phosphorus were tested for early corn growth and final yield. The starter results demonstrated a yield gain of 24 bushels more grain per acre than broadcasting the same fertilizer and 47 bushels more grain per acre than the untreated check plot.

Starter P -- Early Growth and Yield Trial

10-34-0 100 lb/A	Early Growth (12-16 inch stage)	Grain Yield

Broadcast	15.8	176
Sidedress (early June)	9.2	164

Soil P - low
(N,K,S and Zn uniform rates)

University of Nebraska

"Many growers are content to produce around the check yield level of 153 bushels as in the field study," said Kincheloe. "But, varying climatic conditions and soil types don't always allow for these kinds of yields. Therefore, yields can be lost by not using a starter fertilizer and in this case, 47 bushels an acre at $2.50 corn, totals a $117.50 of increased return."

Starter fertilizer not only boosts yields but also hastened maturity by lowering grain moisture at harvest and increasing concentration of nutrient content, like phosphorus, in plant tissue, said Kincheloe. In further research, University of Wisconsin measured maturity performance benefits of starter fertilizer with phosphorus at both low and high soil test value as seen in the following chart. Cold soils at planting time emphasize these effects.

Starter P -- Maturity and Moisture Trial

	Tissue P	Grain Yield	Grain Moisture
Low soil P
No P_2O_5	.33	124	29.9
70 lb/A P_2O_5 (banded 2x2)	.50	158	27.6
High Soil P
No P_2O_5	.40	160	30.5
70 lb/A P_2O_5 (banded 2x2)	.45	171	29.4

University of Wisconsin

According to Kincheloe, there is not much to question about the efficiency of starter fertilizer for Midwest row crops. "Banded or starter applications have tended to show greater efficiency when soil conditions are cool at planting," he said. "In the majority of university testing, starter treatments were also consistently superior regardless of the other methods used in combination with a starter."

RICHARDTON — A Step Ahead For Farmers...

The new 700 series wagon diagonal slide system allows truck drivers close access to the dump wagon and reaches out to put loads in the center of the box And the 45-degree dump angle makes this wagon self-cleaning.

Two models with rugged frames are built to handle either 750 cu. ft. or 1,000 cut. ft. loads.

The wide undercarriage and low profile lower the center of gravity for greater stability on hilly fields.

An adjustable offset hitch is standard to match row crop spacings and the vented roof allows straight-through air flow. Richardton double-reinforced boxes are built to handle up to 30,000 lb. loads with ease.

Breakthrough in spraying accuracy

CUSTOMER REBATES UP TO $1,100!
Call Triple H Equip. For Details...

Wasting chemical and yield on hills and headlands is a thing of the past with Vicon's new flow proportioning and boom compensation system. Application rate remains constant even when ground speed varies or individual boom sections are shut off. That means better coverage with lower input costs.

It is available on all Vicon trailer sprayers with tank capacities up to 785 U.S. gal. (3000 litres) and automatic stabilizing booms from 28' to 62'. There's also a choice of hydraulic or manual folding booms and a range of accessories that make crop spraying less of a chore.

The 7700 Series Row Crop Cultivators Are Designed For You.

The WIL-RICH 7700 Series offers you a row crop cultivator for almost any job. The 7710 is a Danish tine unit designed for high speed work in most soil conditions and 7720 C-shank models give you extra muscle for hard packed ground. Step up to the 7750 Series. It's designed to handle a wide variety of row crop cultivating jobs — from ridge-till corn to conventional tilled beans.

Rigid models are available in 4- 6- and 8-row units. Flatfold models come as either 8-, 12- or 16-row units.

SILO SERVICE

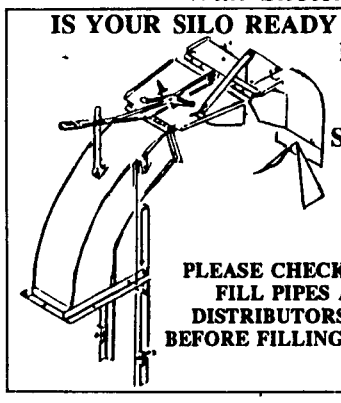
Strengthen And Reseal Your Silo With Shotcrete

STRONGER AND WILL OUT LAST PLASTER

S & S Silo Service Has 10 Years Experience With Shotcrete Relining

IS YOUR SILO READY TO BE FILLED WITH GRASS SILAGE?



PLEASE CHECK YOUR FILL PIPES AND DISTRIBUTORS NOW BEFORE FILLING SEASON

S&S Silo Service prepares the silo surface by using a 3,000 lb. pressure washer, thus making the silo moist, making a much better surface to bond shotcrete. After shotcreting, S&S always takes away any roughness by applying a steel trowel finish.

The excellent bonding of shotcrete to the silo will keep out moisture and prevent mold from growing on the side of the silo.

When planning your forage programs this year, remember that your main objective is to "store the plant and remove it from storage in as good condition as possible." THE UPRIGHT SILO HAS NEVER BEEN EQUALLED IN ITS ABILITY TO DO THIS!!

As herds become larger and labor is becoming more costly and scarce, there is more need to cut time requirements for all parts of the operation. The silo, or a combination of silos can be a key in reducing time spent harvesting, storing, and feeding your herd. "A properly managed upright silo is one of the best investments that a dairy farmer can make." Your best choice is a POURED CONCRETE SOLLENBERGER SILO...

PLY-FOIL is a very efficient form of insulation. In application after application it has proven to be extremely effective at controlling heat gain/loss, thus significantly reducing heating and cooling costs. PLY-FOIL Insulation uses an aluminum foil to reflect up to 97% of the radiant heat.

PLY-FOIL BENEFITS

PLY-FOIL products are clean, lightweight, and non-toxic; are unaffected by changes in humidity, do not shrink; and once installed require no maintenance. They do not promote the growth of fungi or bacteria, and provide no nesting support for rodent or insect pests. PLY-FOIL, which has a Class A/Class 1 fire rating, meets the fire and smoke safety requirements of most federal, state and local building codes.

The panels fit Eagle Rigid Span wood-frame farm buildings with spans from 12 feet to 120 feet. The buildings, according to the manufacturer, are designed to eliminate bird problems. The buildings can be economically insulated from R-19 to R-38, have a ready-to-finish interior, and include a raised center which allows use of lower sidewall.

Dairy Tips By Dr. Randy Lyle, Ph.D.

Purina Mills Dairy Consultant

DO YOU FEED YEAST?

IS THERE A DIFFERENCE BETWEEN YEAST PRODUCTS?

Many dairymen today feed yeast for a number of reasons: to stimulate appetite, reduce rumen pH, and to create more activity in the rumen.

Purina Freshener Pak and Purina Yeast Pack both contain a yeast culture called Yea-Sacc™. Yea-Sacc™ actually grows in the rumen, and as it grows it utilizes the lactic acid in the rumen which has been created by the degradation of carbohydrates. When lactic acid is present in the rumen it lowers the pH and reduces fiber digestion. With less lactic acid in the rumen the cow will maintain better intake with more milk and test.

So next time you buy a bag of yeast consider Purina Yeast Pak.

Purina Yeast Pak contains the following in a palatable 4 ounces/day pelleted feeding rate:

Yea-Sacc™- guaranteed 200 billion C.F.U./lb. (many other yeast products are not guaranteed)
Vitamin E - esstential for the immune function of the body
Vitamin B_{12}- Stimulates appetite and helps to correct low milk fat.
Thiamine - Essential for efficient energy utilization.

Try a bag of Purina Yeast Pak because it's more than just another "yeast" product.

Yea-Sacc™ is a registered trademark of Alltech, Inc.
